$1,000,000 Cut Restored By Senate For the CAA

Garner Economy In Offices Bill More Than Offset By Vote of 34 to 37

The Civil Aeronautics Authority yesterday provided a stumbling block for the Congressional economy drive, and emerged victor over efforts to cut its budget appropriation by $1,000,000.

By a vote of 34 to 37 the Senate restored the CAA fund to its original $12,000,000 total by rejecting the Appropriations Committee reduction to $11,000,000. It was the first reversal suffered by the economy-minded committee, and wiped out the $115,259 saving effected Tuesday when Vice President Garner broke a tie in favor of the spending slashers.

The independent offices bill carrying the CAA item in its $1,139,693,528 total, was on the verge of final passage at the end of the day.

In the House, the bipartisan economy attack met greater success. Funds for Secretary of Commerce Hopkins' "little brain trust" of experts and specialists were eliminated from the $107,379,000 State-Justice-Commerce departments bill on a Republican point of order.

Representative Case (Republican), of South Dakota, was sustained by the chair when he raised the point against a $100,000 item for experts and specialists in Secretary Hopkins' office.

$160,000 Cut Off

To conform, the appropriations subcommittee then sponsored an amendment reducing the appropriation by $100,000, plus another $60,000 unneeded as a result.

Representative Taber, of New York, ranking Republican Appropriations committeeman, sought to strike out $2,166,000 for the housing census, but was repulsed by a 72 to 59 vote.

The Senate battled all afternoon over the unsuccessful $1,000,000 cut in CAA funds, and then, just before recess, the Senate Appropriations Committee met another reverse. Dairy section Senators led an attack on the committee refusal to prohibit use of oleomargerine or butter substitutes, except for cooking purposes, in Veterans' Administration hospitals. The committee recommended that the House prohibition on oleomargarine be stricken from the bill. But the Senate, by a 42-to-11 vote, restored the prohibition.

No funds were involved in the oleomargarine issue.

Passage Predicted

Opponents of the proposed million-dollar cut in CAA funds, led by Senators McCarran, of Nevada; Clark, of Missouri, and Mead, of New York (Democrats), argued the money was needed for both air safety and national defense. Senator Reed (Republican), of Kansas, charged the Government was spending too much on aviation subsidies.

Passage of the bill today was predicted by Senate Majority Leader Barkley. The bill then will go back to the House, which is expected to protest a $39,000,000 Senate increase for the Maritime Commission and restoration of $710,000 for the National Resources Planning Board.

Freezing Weather Forecast for D. C.

Partly cloudy weather with temperatures hovering around the freezing point is forecast for today. The Weather Bureau predicted last night thermometers would fall to 30 degrees early this morning.

Lowest reading yesterday was 41 degrees at 2 a. m. Highest was 47 at 3 p. m.

Ramspeck Bill for Extending Civil Service to Be Up Today

Merit System Advocates Bring Campaign For Measure to Close as Reform League Fights for Enactment by Congress

Merit system advocates yesterday brought their campaign to a climax for passage of the Ramspeck bill extending civil service to between 250,000 and 300,000 Federal employes now outside of its scope. The measure is on the House calendar for consideration today.

The National Civil Service Reform League urged support of the legislation in letters sent to each member of the House, the organization announced yesterday. Its president, former Civil Service Commissioner Samuel H. Ordway, jr., wrote that the bill "would furnish welcome protection to Senators and members of Congress against importunities for assistance in obtaining Government employment."

Commenting on opposition to the bill from certain quarters on the ground that Republicans hope to eliminate many emergency jobs and therefore do not wish incumbents to be "frozen" into the merit system, Ordway argued that all positions should be filled on merit "and not by Democratic, Republican or New Deal political hacks."

"If we should wait until the Republicans have displaced the Democratic hacks and replaced them with their own, the Democrats will oppose civil service classification of the positions just as strongly as the Republicans do now."

Government employe unions have also been active in urging passage of the measure. The C. I. O. United Federal Workers announced that its president, Jacob Baker, had dispatched letters to every member of Congress who voted for the Hatch Act to end pernicious political activity, maintaining that in consistency they should support the Ramspeck bill.

The Hatch Act, he said, placed all employes under the civil service ban on political participation.

Contract Let For Housing At Navy Place

John Ihlder, executive officer of the Alley Dwelling Authority, yesterday announced the award of a $679,500 contract to Charles H. Tompkins Co. for erection of the Navy place housing project, upon recommendation of the U. S. Housing Authority.

Construction will be started within a week, said Ihlder, and 300 working days will be allowed for completion of the contract.

The ADA soon will advertise for bids on another housing project—the so-called Navy Yard site, which is near the one placed under contract yesterday, Ihlder said.

Providing for 203 dwelling units for white occupancy, the Navy place development is being financed by the USHA, which is lending 90 per cent of the capital. Thirteen contractors submitted bids.

Navy place is between Sixth and Seventh and G and I streets southeast.

The alley, the largest inhabited alley in the District, contained 70 dwellings and four stores. These, with 63 sub-standard houses fronting on three of the streets, were demolished as part of the program of ridding the Capital of its slum areas.

Forty-seven of the new dwellings will be two-story homes of four or five rooms, with bath, each designed for one family. The remainder will be two and three-story apartments. Central heat and hot water will be furnished.

Bandit Takes Cab, Drops Companion Off With Driver

Earl F. Byroad, 35, of Arlington, Va., presented himself last night as a taxi driver without a cab—but with a fare.

Byroad told police two men hailed his cab at North Capitol street and New York avenue and asked to be driven to Bethesda. As he passed Sixteenth street and Concord avenue northwest, Byroad said one of the men ordered him out of the car and asked him to hand over his money, which he did—$5. The man who took the money climbed into the driver's seat.

Meanwhile, the holdup man's companion, apparently in a state of intoxication, had left the car, and standing beside Byroad, refused to reenter the car.

"I don't want to ride in that cab any more," he insisted.

Hazen Wins Confirmation By Senate

Sen. Byrnes Denies His Opposition Was for Patronage

The Senate last night confirmed the nomination of Melvin C. Hazen as District Commissioner after Senator Byrnes (Democrat), of South Carolina, withdrew his objections to the appointment.

Byrnes, who delayed action on the appointment three times, said he wished to protest the failure of the Commissioners to reply to his letter on the demotion of a District policeman, Hubert Brodie, from detective sergeant to private.

He denied that his interest in the case of Brodie, a native of South Carolina, was "a matter of patronage."

"In 14 years in the Senate I have never spoken to any Commissioner about a policeman," he said. "There is a disposition on the part of District officials to attribute any interest by a member of Congress in municipal affairs to an effort to get patronage."

Byrns Complaint Studied

The nomination of Paul Edwards, of New York, as District WPA administrator, was approved yesterday by the Senate Appropriations Committee. The Senate is expected to act on the appointment today.

Edwards' confirmation has been held up several weeks while the Senate Appropriations Committee investigated a complaint of Representative Byrns (Democrat), of Tennessee, against the WPA office.

Byrns assailed the office in the House after his secretary and an aide of Edwards had a telephone argument over one of the Representative's former constituents who was trying to get a job.

Senator McKellar (Democrat), of Tennessee, said he had talked with Byrns and understood the dispute had been settled. He said he expected no objection to Edwards' confirmation.

Didn't Know Brodie

Senator Byrnes to the Senate that he did not know Brodie until the policeman came to his office last November and complained that he could not learn why he had been demoted.

Byrns said he wrote a letter to Commissioner Hazen asking for information on the case and received a reply which said that the Commissioner would explain the reason for action "privately" when next they met.

"I wanted no private information," the Senator said. "I thought the action should be a matter of public record."

Several letters were exchanged without the Commissioner divulging the information requested, Byrnes said. It was for this reason that the Senator asked that Hazen's confirmation be withheld.

First Lady Will Testify At Inquiry

Capital Institutions Discussed Over Tea In White House For Hour and a Half

By James D. Secrest
Post Staff Writer

Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt yesterday agreed to appear as the first witness in the House District Committee's investigation of local welfare institutions during an hour-and-a-half conference over tea cups in the White House.

Chairman D'Alesandro of the subcommittee on public health, announced that the inquiry will start probably at 2 o'clock tomorrow afternoon in either the House caucus room or the District Committee room.

D'Alesandro and the District Commissioners said the discussion with Mrs. Roosevelt was highly satisfactory and they were confident that substantial improvements would result from the general investigation.

Present at the informal conference, besides D'Alesandro, were Commissioners Melvin C. Hazen, George E. Allen, and David McCoach, jr., Budget Director Harold Smith, Welfare Director Robert E. Bondy, Juvenile Judge Fay Bentley and Frederick W. McReynolds, chairman of the Board of Public Welfare.

Visits Described

"The conference was tremendously successful," said Commissioner Allen upon leaving the White House.

D'Alesandro said that Mrs. Roosevelt had described her visits to Blue Plains, the Children's Receiving Home, and the Industrial Home School for Boys and cited conditions which she felt needed prompt attention.

"Mrs. Roosevelt gave me valuable information which she will tell the full committee when she testifies," D'Alesandro said. "Her impressions confirm my own observations at Blue Plains."

D'Alesandro was the only member of the Public Health subcommittee who attended the conference, although all members were invited. The chairman explained that several had previous engagements and the others were held at the Capitol by a late House vote.

"Just Isn't Room"

Welfare officials convinced D'Alesandro that his proposal to move all patients in the Blue Plains Hospital to Gallinger Hospital cannot be put into operation.

"They told me that there just isn't room for them," he said, "so I suppose there's nothing more we can do about it."

Earlier in the day D'Alesandro had told newspaper men that the ill inmates at Blue Plains should be moved at once to the municipal hospital because of the inadequate hospital staff at the Home for the Aged and Infirm.

The White House conference, it was learned, covered all phases of

Gas Racket Investigation Sought Here

Poor Grades Found Sold as High Test; District Lacks Power to Act

By Charles A. Stofberg.
Post Staff Writer

Representative Jack Nichols (Democrat), of Oklahoma, last night said he would demand an investigation of charges that "unscrupulous" gasoline dealers were selling inferior fuel under the guise of a "high test" product.

His statement followed one by James D. Gouldin, president of the Washington Gasoline Retailers, who said the District was powerless to check on the dishonest dealer.

Meanwhile, Commissioner Melvin C. Hazen said legislation has been prepared by George M. Roberts, superintendent of weights and measures, to authorize the District to check on gasoline stations. Hazen said he would meet with Roberts before the end of the week on this legislation.

Representative Nichols said his attention had been called to the lack of such legislation and that "it is a very serious matter."

Much Inferior Fuel Found

"This is a very damaging charge and should be investigated immediately," Representative Nichols said.

A member of the House District Committee, Nichols said he would ask Chairman Randolph to appoint a subcommittee immediately for the inquiry.

In his annual report at the close of the last fiscal year, Robert pointed out that a survey had been made by his department, disclosing that of 83 test purchases, fuel in 27 per cent of the cases was inferior to the grade represented. The statement is included in the report of the government of the District of Columbia for the year ended June 30, 1939.

Roberts declared that his agency was without power to prosecute in cases of misrepresentation. In his bill he proposes this power, as well as establishment of a laboratory which would conduct tests to maintain standards.

Swindling Charged

The retailers group, which comprises about 250 of the estimated 600 local dealers, issued the following statement through its president:

"The findings of the District government investigators can be readily understood when the situation is analyzed. When a filling station operator grants a 2-cents-a-gallon discount, or any discount from the current prevailing retail price, that discount must come out of his margin of profit, for he has to pay the same wholesale price, regardless.

"The 100 per cent stations—that is, those selling only one brand of gasoline—normally get a 4-cent-per-gallon-profit margin. Mixed stations receive 3½ cents. Isn't it logical, therefore, that some of the more unscrupulous dealers will resort to swindling to protect their modest margin of profit?"

Portrait of Jackson's Wife May Be Hung in White House

Rachel Donelson Jackson, "Old Hickory's" beloved wife, may soon take her place among the First Ladies of the White House portrait gallery, 111 years after her death.

Senator Tow Stewart (Democrat), of Tennessee, received Tuesday a petition from Mrs. Jay G. Stephenson, chairman of the Tennessee Federation of Democratic Women, urging him to seek Senate authorization for hanging a portrait of Mrs. Jackson, to be paid for by popular subscription in Tennessee.

The proposal was advanced as a "gesture of belated recognition to "one of the great women of American history," with the claim that no other wife of a President ever exerted more influence on the actions of her husband.

Rachel died as First Lady-elect on December 22, 1828, and it was said that her death was hastened by the abuse heaped on her in Andrew Jackson's campaign for the Presidency. Jackson was her second husband, and the divorce Rachel secured in 1791 from Capt. Lewis Robards had not been above suspicion.

Matters were made worse rather than better when Capt. Robards secured another divorce from Rachel after her marriage to Jackson. Rachel and Andrew promptly remarried in 1794, but gossip was only temporarily quieted.

In the Presidential campaign of 1828 the double marriage and double divorce proved a rich armory for Jackson's enemies, and his wife's feelings were not spared. She was in failing health at the time, and an overheard conversation in Nashville is said to have caused her final collapse.

Gen. Jackson's devotion to his wife didn't cease with her death, and in her memory he championed the cause of another victim of wagging tongues who had been her friend, Peggy O'Neale.

Peggy, labeled "gorgeous hussy," whose reputation was twice investigated by Congress, caused an upheaval in Jackson's Cabinet. An innkeeper's daughter and a widow who would not mourn her suicide husband as convention dictated, she rocked Washington society by marrying Senator John Henry Eaton.

From Mrs. John C. Calhoun down, the ladies of Washington ignored Peggy Eaton. And when the Senator became Secretary of War, Cabinet members with proud wives resigned.

Even "Old Hickory" had to retreat after the wife of the Danish Minister refused to sit next to Peggy Eaton at dinner. The Minister was recalled, but Secretary Eaton was sent with his too-beautiful wife first to govern Florida and then to represent the United States in Moscow.

More Benefit Parties Held; Cash Pours in for Blood Bank

The Capital's blood bank campaign progressed yesterday with more benefit parties, and also with several outright contributions of cash for the blood bank at Children's Hospital.

Largest benefit bridge last night was that given at the Hotel Shoreham by the Washington Bridge League, local unit of the American Contract Bridge League.

Cash donations received yesterday by The Post and the Children's Hospital included an anonymous gift of $50. The hospital reported receipt of checks for $20, $25, and $5, and several smaller ones.

Returning yesterday from a regional conference of American Legion child welfare workers in Richmond, Public Printer A. E. Giegengack reported that the success of the 1939 Children's Hospital drive and the enthusiasm being shown in this year's campaign impressed the delegates so much that many of them resolved to take up the same cause in their various States and cities.

Giegengack, child welfare chairman of the District department, American Legion, described to the delegates in detail the Legion's par-

Senate Group Votes Aid to Finns as House Blocks Russian Break

Soviet Troops Die By Thousands In Vain Attacks On Enemy Lines

By the Associated Press

Helsinki, Feb. 7.—The Red army, apparently determined to grind down Finland by sheer weight of man power and reckless of the cost, pounded on tonight against this nation's snowy bastions with vast mechanized forces despite a list of Soviet dead and wounded which Finnish military observers estimated at 20,000 in the past week.

Armored sleds jammed with infantrymen and pulled by tanks—in contrast to last week's technique of pushing the sled before the tank—piled up against the Mannerheim Line in agonizing masses of twisted steel and dead and dying men. The Finns smashed a score of these sleds on one day.

5,000 Dead in 7 Days

The seven-day offensive in the Summa sector of the Karelian Isthmus—directly against the Mannerheim position—was reported to have cost the Red army 5,000 dead. Finnish and Russian soldiers tonight were fighting over a 20-mile battlefield at Summa—dotted with frozen bodies.

A Finnish army communique also reported 1,500 Russians were killed at Kuhmo in north Finland during the past few days in repulsing repeated Soviet attacks. A Russian ski battalion was dispersed northeast of Lake Ladoga with almost 300 dead left on the field.

In the Arctic the main Russian forces were reported falling back from Lake Marka toward Salla, some 35 miles from the frontier.

Reliable sources said light detachments of Soviet soldiers attacked the Finns on the cross-Finland highway 20 miles southwest of Salla, to cover the retreat. Heavy Russian field pieces had been withdrawn.

2 Hospitals Damaged

Finnish casualties during the past week were not mentioned but they were believed to be fairly heavy in the Summa sector.

Russian bombers destroyed a prison at Kajaani today but Russian prisoners of war kept there were not injured. They were rushed to air raid shelters.

Two hospitals and a teachers college were damaged and a number of Finns injured. Two Finns were killed.

Three houses were destroyed, and about 20 wooden buildings set afire.

Ten planes took part in the raid, which lasted more than four hours.

There was another raid today on Turku, Finland's third largest and oldest city, but no details were learned.

Foreign observers were speculating on how how long Finnish morale could stand up against the staggering blows being hurled by the Russians, particularly from the sky. The Finns need an effective air force.

Morale Remains Steady

But the Finns have shown no signs of weakened morale to date.

"In the Summa sector the enemy launched four attacks during the day (yesterday) supported by tanks," the Finnish communique said, "but was beaten back each time with heavy losses."

"The attempt to convey infantry in armored sleds drawn by tanks failed. In the course of the day altogether 20 tanks were put out of action or destroyed.

Two more Russian tanks were destroyed when the Finns dispersed the ski battalion northeast of Lake Ladoga.

Detailed reports from the Karelian Isthmus indicated the Finns

British Speed War Materials To Finland

Aircraft and Tanks Included, Commons Hears From Butler

By the Associated Press

London, Feb. 7.—Britain underscored her support for Finland against Russia today with an official statement indicating she is extending virtually every war aid short of active military intervention.

Assurance that Finland's appeals for help were being answered substantially were given in the House of Commons as a movement to speed full material assistance to Finland gained steamroller strength in France, where the authoritative newspaper Le Temps came out for "effective, complete and total" aid.

Replying to a question whether "every step is being taken to aid Finland quickly," British Foreign Undersecretary R. A. Butler said "Yes. The urgency of this matter is very much realized by the government."

"Measures have been taken to assist the Finnish government with war material, including aircraft,"

Pneumonia At 5-Year High In Washington

Pneumonia is more prevalent in Washington now than it has been in years, an investigation revealed yesterday.

Crowded hospitals, mounting case reports and an unusuually busy Health Department laboratory, where pneumonia typing is performed, all testified to the seriousness of the situation.

So far this week, 53 cases have been reported, or nearly one-third the number reported for the preceding five weeks of 1940.

A private physician specializing in the prevention and treatment of pneumonia pointed out that the incidence of the disease now is probably the highest that it has been here in at least five years.

Fortunately, however, he added, the death rate is being held down by the wide use of sulfapyridine, an effective chemical, and serum.

Voorhis Objects in House To Dies Magazine Article

By John B. Oakes

A member of the Dies Committee took the floor of the House late yesterday to protest that a current magazine article written by Chairman Dies has put one of the committee's investigations into "an extremely difficult position."

Shortly before Representative Voorhis (Democrat), of California, voiced his objections to Dies' article, the committee in open session had heard preliminary testimony from William Dudley Pelley, Silver Shirt chieftain.

Pelley, for whom the committee searched several months last year, said that in the last six weeks he had had "a total change of heart" in respect to the committee, and he apologized for having opposed it. Acting Chairman Starnes heatedly retorted that he didn't care what Pelley thought about the committee.

Voorhis' criticism of Dies' article—which deals with subversive activities in California—was offered to the House just before adjournment. Pointing out that the committee was at the present time investigating "the California situation," Voorhis protested that "the

McCormack Tries To Cut Off Salary Of Ambassador, Embassy Funds

By Robert C. Albright
Post Staff Writer

Two plans for limited financial aid to Finland yesterday received the overwhelming indorsement of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee as the House twice rejected independent moves to end diplomatic relations with Russia.

By a margin of only three votes, the House turned back an amendment denying further salary appropriations for the Ambassador to the Soviet Union.

Later the House crushed, 95 to 38, a motion to bar use of any State Department funds for maintenance of the embassy in Moscow.

"Won't Help Finland"

Representative McCormack (Democrat), of Massachusetts, offered both amendments during House consideration of the State-Justice-Commerce department bill. Administration leaders fought both slaps at Finland's assailant, Majority Leader Rayburn contending: "This won't help Finland and it won't hurt Russia."

The Senate Foreign Relations Committee approved, 12 to 6, a bill doubling the Export-Import Bank's revolving fund $200,000,000, making possible $20,000,000 nonmilitary loans to both Finland and China.

By an 18-to-0 vote, the committee also went on record for the Harrison plan for expeditious SEC registry and private flotation of a Finnish government bond issue.

Both measures may be called up in the Senate today, following passage of the pending independent offices bill.

Isolationists Back Bill

The Export-Import Bank method of nonmilitary credit received the unexpected support of Senate isolationists such as Senator Johnson (Republican), of California; Senator Vandenberg (Republican), of Michigan, and Senator La Follette (Progressive), of Wisconsin.

Surprise provision for Chinese aid came with an amendment sponsored by Chairman Pittman, providing:

"That the aggregate amount of loans outstanding at any one time that may hereafter be authorized to any one country shall not exceed $20,000,000."

No specific mention was made either of Finland (which already has received $10,000,000 in nonmilitary credit) or China (which has received $25,000,000 in unrestricted credit).

Restriction Is Provided

Federal Loan Administrator Jones previously told the committee that China was seeking $75,000,000 additional, for which it proposed to pay in exports of tin. Negotiations now are in progress. The committee amendment would permit only $20,000,000 more. Unlike the former Chinese loan, this would be restricted to nonmilitary purchases.

Approval of the revised Export-Import Bank bill crossed party and isolationist lines.

Five Democrats and only one Republican finally opposed the bill, which already had 18 to 2 Senate Banking Committee approval. These were Harrison, Clark (of Missouri), George, Reynolds, Van Nuys (all Democrats), and Capper (Republican).

It was said that the following voted for the measure:

Senators Pittman, Wagner, Murray, Schwellenbach, Pepper, Green, Barkley, Guffey (Democrats), Johnson and Vandenberg (Republicans), LaFollette (Progressive), and Shipstead (Farmer-Labor).

Senator Vandenberg, who with the late Senator Borah, led last ses-

Over the Coffee

By Harlan Miller

ROOSEVELT'S OVERSIGHT

Three or four days a week I am a raconteur, a gossip, a town crier of anecdotes and behind-the-scenes stories which often have more significance (alas!) than many of the political speeches or Congressional orations of the same day.

Harlan Miller.

But one or two days a week I like to knit my brows earnestly like the statesmen, stuffed-shirts and Nation-savers. The same method may produce the same results, but I cannot refrain from pointing a finger at the New Deal's glaring failure to make a frontal attack on the job problem, along the lines explored in Canada and Germany.

* * * *

The Rooseveltians have attacked the job dilemma from above, from below, from the side, from the rear. They have invoked an assortment of fancy Rube Goldberg devices as complex as an atom-pulverizer.

* * * *

But they have failed completely to mobilize the enormous emotionalism of Americans. They have not appealed to deep patriotism in the job hunt. They have not called on the strength with which this Republic would meet a war emergency, to meet a situation more devastating to us than our last war. They have not gone job hunting as we used to on Main street.

"—Shirley must help too"

I hear that the New Dealers are planning a job drive. I hear that McNutt, who now has the job bureau on his organization chart, intends something. The Republicans mention the jobless often, and may come forward with a solution as simple as standing an egg on its end.

* * * *

Whoever tackles it, here is what must be done: The national job hunt must be undertaken as a combination Liberty Loan drive, volunteer enlistment campaign and Blue Eagle crusade, with delegations calling on the country's 2,000,000 bosses, door to door along Main Street.

* * * *

There must be 4-minute speakers and rallies at all the luncheon clubs. There must be parades with bands, and great searchlights as at movie premiers, and red torches, and Shirley Temple must help, too.

* * * *

Every two hours on the screen of every movie theater the movie stars easiest to gaze upon must appeal to the employers to Hire a Man. Let Deanna Durbin sing "Brother, Can You Spare a Job?" at the head of Wall street, and let Lily Pons sing to a rally in Grant Park at Chicago.

* * * *

Enlist Kitty Foyle to handle the drive in Philadelphia; put Bing Crosby and Eddie Cantor and the mental giants of "Information Please" on the air to attack the riddle in two-hour radio programs. Give every employer a red, white and blue poster to hang in his window; "I Gave a Job."

"—a job quota for every town"

Put a giant thermometer at the intersection of Main and First streets in every town and post a brass band around it to play "There's a Hot Time in the Old Town" at noon every day as the red line climbs upward toward the quota assigned to each community.

* * * *

There are 309,789 firms in the country which employ more than five men each. Many of them could put on from one to 50 men—if people would pull money out of their socks and mouldy bank accounts and lock boxes and buy what they can use, from firms that give jobs to men to make it.

* * * *

Give the customers signs to hang in the front windows: "I helped keep a man at work." Guarantee each new job for one year; perhaps it might be practical to let employers exempt their pay roll bulges on their tax returns. Half the stores I go into seem understaffed.

* * * *

The Republic that sent 2,000,000 overseas in a year can create 2,000,000 jobs in a year. The 10,000,000 unemployed are in greater danger than any of them were in 1917. Where are the experts, the specialists who know how to take the warm, generous American emotions out of the refrigerator in a crisis?

Garner Action Is Awaited In Illinois

Sen. Taft Decides Not to File There As a Candidate

Political circles last night were expecting a decision within a few days on whether Vice President Garner will enter the Illinois Presidential preference primary in opposition to the third-term entry made on behalf of President Roosevelt.

Published reports that the Vice President would enter the Illinois Democratic fight, or had virtually decided to, were termed unauthorized by Garner circles here. They declared no decision had been reached, though indicating that all phases of the question were being examined and that a decision might be expected soon. They emphasized that the possibility of such a Garner-Roosevelt contest had not been ruled out.

Petitions to place Mr. Roosevelt's name on the ballot were filed last Saturday by the Democratic city organization of Chicago. They were not accompanied, however, by the customary signed declaration of candidacy. Word from Illinois has indicated, however, that unless Mr. Roosevelt specifically withdraws his name it will be placed on the ballot without such a declaration.

Challenge From Dewey

Dewey is the only Republican Presidential candidate who has filed in Illinois, and his New York headquarters last night challenged Taft "and all other aspirants" to contest with him there.

Earlier in the day, however, the Ohio Senator issued a statement saying:

Earlier in the day, Senator Robert A. Taft, of Ohio, announced that he would not enter the Illinois Republican Presidential primary against District Attorney Thomas E. Dewey, of New York.

"I shall not enter the Illinois Presidential preference primary, first, because it is merely advisory under the Illinois law; second, because I cannot possibly be away from the Senate for the time necessary, in a large State like Illinois, to make the kind of campaign I should wish to make if my name were entered.

"The only decisive popular verdict on candidates results from a personal campaign in which the voters get a chance to see, hear and meet the candidates. That is the kind of campaign I conducted in Ohio, and the kind I would conduct in the Nation if nominated, but I can't do it between now and April 9 in Illinois."

Sprague Statement

A statement in Dewey's behalf came from J. Russel Sprague, his campaign manager, at New Yirk, as Dewey set out from New York for a West Coast speaking tour.

Sprague's statement said: "I am extremely sorry Senator Taft has decided not to enter the Illinois primaries. I hope he will reconsider and that all other aspirants for the Republican nomination will file . . . .

"The American people have the right to determine whom they wish as a candidate at this critical moment in our national affairs.

"There is only one way they can do so, and that is through the primaries. Mr. Dewey believes this and that is why he has filed."

It was announced here that Paul V. McNutt, Federal Security Administrator and Democratic Presidential aspirant, will make a five-day speaking tour through Missouri, Oklahoma and Arkansas late this month.

McNutt is expected to meet Oklahoma Democratic leaders at Lawton, Okla.

Bill Reported On Court Check For Agencies

Rules Group Favors Review by Judiciary On Bureaus' Orders

By the Associated Press

The House Rules Committee yesterday gave the green light to a sweeping bill which, sponsors said, would curb the power of Federal boards and agencies.

The measure, given right of way to the House floor for consideration there, would provide individuals with an increased opportunity to appeal from rules, regulations, orders and decisions of the agencies.

Introduced by Representative Walter (Democrat), of Pennsylvania, the bill is similar to one which the Senate passed last session, but voted to reconsider at the request of Senator Minton (Democrat), of Indiana, and other Administration supporters.

Critics of the legislation contended last session that it would afford opportunities for endless delay and "paralyze" administrative authority. The House Judiciary Committee recommended passage, however, declaring:

"The law must provide that the governors shall be governed and the regulators shall be regulated, if our present form of government is to endure.

"Of course, any procedure for hearings affords an opportunity for delay. No one questions that an autocrat, if benevolent, may not be the most effective administrator but the United States Government is not founded on autocracy."

The Judiciary Committee expressed the opinion also that, unless a more efficient administration of the Federal Government could be obtained in accordance with law, it might become necessary to provide that all officers and employes of Federal administrative agencies above a stated minimum salary should hold office for "comparatively short terms" and be passed upon by the Senate before going on the pay roll.

Walter's bill must await a decision by the House leadership as to when it shall be taken up by the House.

The measure provides that administrative rules must be issued within one year after enactment of the statute upon which they are based, that they may be issued only after public notice and hearings, that "substantially interested" persons may obtain hearings upon request for reconsideration of any rule, and that the United States Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia shall have authority to determine whether any rule is in conflict with the Constitution or the statute under which it was issued.

In addition, the measure provides uniform procedure for appealing decisions or orders of Federal agencies to United States courts of appeals.

Secretary Perkins Answers Lewis

By the Associated Press

Secretary of Labor Perkins, replying to John L. Lewis' charge that she was "woozy in the head," yesterday defended her attitude on unemployment.

Lewis had said that he sent four labor men to her to urge a national conference to attack the problem of joblessness and that the four came away "woozy, just like Miss Perkins."

Miss Perkins said she had asked for specific suggestions for the agenda of such a conference and the four C. I. O. men made none.

5-Year Plan Explained

The question where the money is to come from was discussed, along with the adequacy of the local tax rate, the necessity of balancing the District budget, and the intricacy of enacting appropriations bills.

The Commissioners explained their plan for a five-year program of municipal building as disclosed after an inspection of Blue Plains on Tuesday.

D'Alesandro said after the conference that his subcommittee would uncover the needs of the welfare institutions and leave the solution of the financial problems to the appropriations committees.

Tenerowicz Resigns

The public health subcommittee lost one of its members yesterday when Representative Tenerowicz (Democrat), of Michigan, resigned from the House District Committee to accept an appointment to the Interstate and Foreign Commerce Committee.

He was replaced by Representative Michael J. Kennedy (Democrat), of New York, who is serving his first term in Congress. Like Representative Kennedy (Democrat), of Maryland, he is an insurance man.

On Capitol Hill

Doubt was expressed yesterday that former Representative Byron Scott now had the right to contest the election in 1938 of the late Representative Thomas M. Eaton, California Republican.

BYRON SCOTT

Chairman Gavagan (Democrat), of New York, of House Elections Committee No. 2, hearing Scott's claims to the seat, suggested Scott might have invalidated any claim he might have had by acceptance during the pendency of his election contest of a $400-a-month job as secretary to the State highway commission.

Gavagan said State law prohibited a person holding a Federal position from assuming, at the same time, a civil office in the State government.

"If the House should seat him," he said, "Mr. Scott would be seated as of January 1, 1939. He then would be in the anomalous position of collecting salary from the Federal Government and from the State government at one and the same time."

Scott disputed the validity of the State statute, asserting that it violated constitutional provisions prescribing the qualifications for members of the House.

The House yesterday elected Representative Rayburn, of Texas, the Democratic leader, as Speaker Pro Tempore during the illness of Speaker Bankhead, who is suffering from a slight attack of influenza.

The House elected Democratic Representatives to standing committees, as follows:

Tenerowic (Michigan), Interstate and Foreign Commerce; Sheridan (Pennsylvania), Insular Affairs, Territories, and Civil Service; Gossett (Texas), Census; Schwert (New York), Postoffice and Post Roads; Camp (Georgia), World War Veterans' Legislation, and Bryson (South Carolina), Census.

$100,000,000 Bank Is Urged For Americas

Currency Stabilizing Is Object; Rep. Fish Offers Program

As a means of stabilizing the currencies in the Western Hemisphere nations, an inter-American financial and economic committee yesterday recommended establishment of a $100,000,000 international bank.

The bank would be operated jointly by the American republics, with the member governments as stockholders. For any government to participate it would be required to subscribe to a minimum number of the 1,000 shares, of $100,000 par value, of bank stock.

Besides working toward currency stabilization the bank, in the opinion of the committee, would "stimulate international trade and travel and promote industrial, agricultural and mining development" in the Americas.

Minimums Urged

The United States, Argentine and Brazil, $5,000,000 each; Mexico and Venezuela, $3,500,000; Chile, Colombia and Cuba, $3,000,000; Peru, $2,500,00; Uruguay, $2,00,000; Bolivia, $1,500,000; Dominican Republic, Guatemala and Panama, $1,000,000; Costa Rica, Ecuador, El Salvador, Haiti, Honduras, Nicaragua and Paraguay, $500,000.

Antonio Espinosa de Los Monteros, Mexican delegate, said Mexico would participate in the subscription of shares in the bank.

"On many occasions President Cardenas has shown his readiness to work enthusiastically toward achieving the common ideals of the Americas," he declared. "Therefore, I believe that Mexico will welcome this opportunity to participate in an institution created by and for the benefit of all the American nations."

Fish Proposal

Creation of a billion-dollar international trade and credit market to stimulate trade with Latin America was proposed yesterday by Representative Fish (Republican), New York.

He said the primary purpose was to take some of the gold buried in Kentucky and "put it to work for the American people."

His bill would authorize the President to appoint a commission of five members to set up the trade and credit market with a capital of $1,000,000,000, against which gold certificates would be issued for use in trade among member nations. The Secretary of the Treasury would be empowered to turn over to the market in gold bullion 45 per cent of its initial capital stock.

U. S. Produces More, Employs Fewer in 1940

Federal Reserve Board Reports a Decline In Industrial Total

The Federal Reserve Board said yesterday that American industry was producing more goods, but employing 1,000,000 fewer persons than in 1929.

In its monthly bulletin, the board estimated the seasonally adjusted index of industrial production for January at 120, the highest for any January on record. However, this figure represented a decline of eight from December, due to an unseasonal decline in steel, textile and mineral production. December's index was the highest for any month on record.

The January figure of 120 was 19 points above the first month of 1939. It compared, however, with an average of 124 in the last quarter of 1939.

Reflects Technical Progress

"The larger total volume of output currently than in 1929 reflects continued technical progress during the decade," the board said. "The number of persons employed, excluding those working on relief projects, is slightly smaller than ten years ago and those with jobs are working much shorter hours.

"Employment in nonagricultural occupations at the end of 1939 was about 35,000,000 persons, which is 8,000,000 more than in 1932, but 1,000,000 less than in 1929."

Also in this period, the board noted, population has increased about 8 per cent.

"National income payments in the last quarter of 1939," the board continued, "were at a rate of about $72,000,000,000 per year, as compared with a rate of $68,000,000,0000 in the second quarter.

Wage Payments Increase

"Much of the growth in income in the latter part of the year was in wage payments of factories, where rising industrial activity was reflected in increases in both the number employed and the length of the average work week. There were smaller increases in agricultural income and salaries and wages in the mining, transportation, trade and service industries. Dividends showed a considerable rise.

"The higher level of income payments in recent months has been reflected in increased purchases of commodities by consumers, and retail sales have been large for durable goods, such as automobiles and household equipment, as well as for nondurable goods, such as clothing. Residential building has been well maintained for the season, although still below the level of the 1920's."

Phillips Opposes U. S. Oil Control

A House Interstate Commerce subcommittee yesterday heard Gov. Phillips of Oklahoma testify that a proposed Federal petroleum regulation bill would create a "Federal dictator" over the industry and would subject it "to the arbitrary, dictatorial, political control of a central authority."

He said that the proposal not only is unconstitutional but is unnecessary from the standpoint of conservation and national defense.

Representative William H. Cole (Democrat), of Maryland, sponsor of the proposal, presented the subcommittee a Federal Power Commission opinion declaring that State control is neither able to accomplish adequate conservation nor prevent waste of oil and gas.

Freeman Asks 'Wilderness Of Silence'

Lenten Appeal Made By Episcopal Bishop In 'Speed-Mad' Times

A Lenten appeal for more meditation in a "speed-mad" and confusing world came yesterday from the Right Rev. James E. Freeman, Bishop of Washington, at Epiphany Episcopal Church.

"The wars in Europe would stop tomorrow if the powers precipitating the conflict would be forced into a 'wilderness of silence,'" the prelate said at the Washington Federation of Churches' Ash Wednesday services.

Bishop Freeman was presented by the Rev. Alvin Lamar Wills, pastor of Our Saviour Episcopal Church, Brookland, and chairman of the public meetings committee of the federation.

Catholic Services

Masses and distribution of ashes for the penitent in Catholic churches, and Holy Communion and other services in many Protestant churches drew thousands of the faithful.

Principal Catholic services were centered at the Franciscan Monastery, Brookland; St. Matthew's Cathedral, St. Patrick's, the Church of the Immaculate Conception and at others.

Protestant interest was focused on the Washington Cathedral, Epiphany and St. John's Episcopal churches, Grace Lutheran, Foundry Methodist Church and the Penn Theater.

Noonday Lenten services of Southeast Protestant churches at the last place were addressed by Dr. Bernard K. Braskamp, pastor of Gunton - Temple Presbyterian Church. Dr. J. Lowrey Fendrich, whose Metropolitan Presbyterian congregation is in charge of the services this week, presided, and a quartet sang. Today's speaker will be the Rev. R. Paul Schearrer, pastor of Takoma Park Presbyterian Church.

Methodist Rites

Washington Methodists last night converged on Foundry Church for their annual Ash Wednesday Corporate Communion rites, and heard a message from Dr. Fred G. Holloway, president of Western Maryland College, Westminster, Md. Drs. G. Ellis Williams and Edgar C. Beery, District superintendent, presided. Protestant congregations of Chevy Chase will meet tonight at 8 at Wesley Methodist Church to launch weekly Lenten rites, congregations alternating as hosts.

Dr. Oliver J. Hart, pastor of St. John's, Lafayette Square, yesterday morning urged each parishioner to send him a story concerning a "Christian victory" during the season.

Lutherans of the Washington area will initiate union Lenten rites next Monday night, with Luther Place Memorial Church, Thomas Circle, as the opening host congregation. Dr. Gideon Olson, of New York, will preach.

Chest Clinic Is Voted Grant Of $3,840

Ruhland Program Tacitly Indorsed By Association

Peace—or at least an armistice—came yesterday to the Capital's tuberculosis control front when the District Tuberculosis Association agreed to continue subsidizing the municipal chest clinic until June 30.

By voting a grant of $3,840 for this purpose, the association's board of directors gave tacit indorsement to Health Officer George C. Ruhland's tuberculosis control program. At the same time the directors served notice that he need not expect such aid to be continued when a new fiscal year begins July 1.

Indorse Action

Dr. Ruhland originally requested an $11,300 allotment from the association, to pay salaries of five clerks and one social worker at the municipal clinic and pay part of the salary of a surgeon at Glenn Dale Sanatorium for a full year. The board of directors voted only $1,280 last week, but the executive committee, meeting last Saturday, proposed the amount be raised to $3,840.

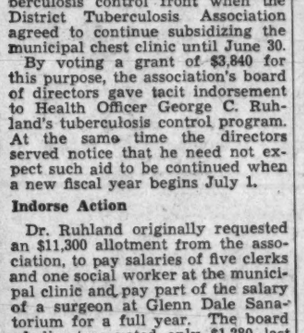
Meeting again yesterday, the directors indorsed the executive group's action.

This means that the clinic's present program of case finding and hospitalization will be continued in the present form until June 30. After that it will have to be curtailed unless Congress replaces the appropriations to be withdrawn by the association, a private organization which raises its money by sale of Christmas seals.

Ruhland Grateful

Dr. Ruhland, one of the directors of the association and who attended yesterday's meeting, last night said he was "very grateful for the association's contribution."

Other board members present were Dr. J. Winthrop Peabody, president; Dr. Luther H. Reichelderfer, first vice president; Willard C. Smith, second vice president; Ross Garrett, treasurer; Mrs. W. Frank Persons, secretary, and Dr. Numa P. G. Adams, Dr. James G. Townsend, the Rev. D. E. Wiseman, Sidney F. Taliaferro, Risley G. Hunt, Daniel J. Donovan, Dr. Watson W. Eldridge, Miss Gertrude H. Bowling, Dr. C. Willard Camalier and Mrs. Ernest R. Grant.



Charges Cards Are Stacked in Battle of Beauty

Associated Press WIREPHOTO

Ruth Allen, chairman of the Boston Professional Models, who wasn't behind the door when allurement was distributed, charged yesterday that the cards were being stacked in Boston's Battle of Beauty, begun as an attempt by professional models to eliminate competition from debutante ranks. She said tickets for the glamour contest between the two factions, scheduled for February 19, were being priced so high supporters of the models would be excluded. She also complained that the debs had arranged for gowns from the city's best shops, while the models were told to "get their own." "Maybe we'll wear sarongs," she said. The one she is wearing above places her at no disadvantage

Boy Testifies Police Officer Beat Him

Board Told Varney Struck Youth Found Playing in Court

Frank A. Varney, 42, police lieutenant, was accused yesterday by 16-year-old Michael Sansalone of cursing and beating him at the Fourth Precinct station, November 19.

Varney was charged with "willfully maltreating and using unnecessary violence toward a prisoner," on the complaint of Michael's father, Joseph Sansalone, of 240 First street southwest. The charge postponed Varney's retirement from the Police Department, which was set for February 1.

Young Sansalone told the three-man board, meeting in the Fourth Precinct Station, that he was forced to accompany Lieut. Varney and a police sergeant to the Fourth Precinct station after he was found playing football in Wonders court southwest.

The officer struck him several times, used abusive language toward him and threw him against a locker, Michael testified before Inspector William G. Stott, Capt. Floyd Truscott and Assistant Corporation Counsel Chester H. Gray, comprising the board.

He said he was detained at the station house about an hour when he was released and taken home by another policeman. His father then went to the station house and thanked Varney for releasing him, Michael continued. It was not until the next day that his father inquired about several bruises on his face, he said.

It is expected that Varney will testify today when the trial is resumed.

Varney, who lives at 904 G place northwest, was recommended for retirement last month by a board of police surgeons. They said he was physically unfit for further duty because of blood clots in his legs.

Police Recapture Youth, 16, After Alexandria Jail Break

Boy Steals Deputy Marshal's Revolver And Flees in Stolen Auto; Squad Car Crowds Him to Stop in Bladensburg Road

A 16-year-old boy was again in custody last night, having been recaptured less than an hour after he grabbed his jailer's gun in Alexandria, and made a desperate break for freedom in a stolen car.

Arthur Beck, alias Pete Jones and Arthur Jackson, escaped from the United States marshal's office in Alexandria while he and two associates were being fingerprinted. After apparently attempting to shoot, he eluded pursuers long enough to steal an automobile and speed into Washington.

Virginia authorities broadcast a lookout for the car and boy at 2:16 p. m. A few minutes before 3 p. m. a District police scout car crowded the automobile to a stop in the 2700 block of Bladensburg road northeast. Beck surrendered without resistance to the policemen, R. W. Mower and C. G. Mitchell, of the Ninth Precinct.

Another youth, Robert Carr, 20, of Mechanicsville, N. Y., was in the car with Beck, police reported. He said he had thumbed a ride from Beck.

According to United States Deputy Marshal G. Stewart Hamm, Beck and two companions, Rosario Bruno, 16, and Ray Jackson, 16, were arrested at Triangle, Va., Saturday and were being held for Martinsburg, W. Va., authorities in connection with automobile thefts.

Bruno was released late yesterday after Beck and Jackson pleaded guilty to the thefts and agreed to return to Martinsburg. However, Beck will be tried in Alexandria Police Court this morning on a charge growing out of the theft of the "getaway" car.

Hamm said he took his service revolver from his holster and placed it in a desk drawer as a precautionary measure while fingerprinting the prisoners. He stated he thought his action was unobserved.

Several minutes later, he said, he started to take the suspects to the cell block and in the corridor of the Postoffice Building, Beck turned to the right instead of the left.

"When I called to him he pulled a gun," Hamm declared. "He asked me for money and I told him I did not have any. He asked the other boys if they wanted to go with him, but I convinced them it was foolish. I heard the trigger snap as he aimed the gun right at me. There were only three bullets in it and I guess the hammer hit an empty chamber. Then he went out the door."

Squad Car Sets Trap

Hamm said he telephoned Alexandria police immediately and had an alarm broadcast. United States Commissioner John W. Monroe was less than 10 feet away examining commitment papers against the trio when Beck escaped.

Mower and Mitchell heard the radio broadcast and took up a position at New York avenue and Bladensburg road northeast. They had to wait only a short time before the car sped by, traveling toward Baltimore.

Mower said the fugitive car was going faster than 60 miles an hour when it was forced into the curb. License plates on the machine were listed to Linwood Edwards, of 423 South Pitt street, Alexandria. He reported it stolen.

Christian Front Men Deny Guilt Amid Uproar

By the Associated Press

New York, Feb. 7.—In a courtroom loud with the mutterings of their sympathizers, 17 Christian Front members accused of plotting an anti-Semitic campaign with bombs and terror pleaded not guilty today to charges of seditious conspiracy to overthrow the Government and conspiracy to steal Army ammunition and explosives.

An indictment charging them with conspiring with other "persons unknown" was handed up a short time before to Federal Judge Matthew T. Abbruzzo in Brooklyn. Bail ranging from $5,000 to $20,000 was fixed.

This was a material reduction from the $50,000 bond originally set for each defendant, but the murmurings from among the 500 spectators apparently were directed mainly at the fact that Judge Abbruzzo had refused to make further reductions.

Only after U. S. Marshal Arthur Jaeger had hurriedly assembled nine deputies was the uproar stilled. In the meantime, the judge had threatened to have the room cleared, and Arthur Garfield Hays, counsel for the American Civil Liberties Union, had been seized by the arms by two deputies and escorted toward a chair.

Hays had attempted to speak about the matter of bail and the chief objector to his attempt was Leo Healey, counsel to one of the defendants, who told the court:

". . . He has nothing whatever to do with this client . . . and I request that the court forbid him permission to speak."

Protesting, Hays sat down for the remainder of the proceedings and later told reporters he planned to try to bring about a bail reduction.

Believed seeking dictatorship

"We need hardly point out," he said, "that if the charges here are sound there is no group in the community that would condemn the intolerance of the defendants more than ourselves . . .

"We point out that however misguided people are, yet where the crime charged is political in nature the defendants are likely to be sincere in their beliefs and in an endeavor to justify themselves are more likely to appear at trial than is the ordinary criminal."

The 17 were arrested 3½ weeks ago by agents of the Federal Bureau of Investigation, whose chief, J. Edgar Hoover, asserted their ultimate aim had been the establishment of a dictatorship and the eradication of Jews.

Conviction on both counts of the indictment could bring maximum penalties of 8 years in prison and $15,000 in fines.

Canada Asked To Reelect Government

Mackenzie King, Defense Minister Explain War Policy

By Frederick T. Birchall
Copyright by New York Times

Ottawa, Feb. 7.—The Liberal government laid before the people tonight its case for a return to office to prosecute the war.

The speakers were Prime Minister Mackenzie King, who made a nation-wide broadcast from Ottawa, and Norman L. Rogers, minister of defense, who addressed his constituency at Kingston, Ontario.

The prime minister's was a carefully restrained exposition of his government's course.

Not once did he mention by name his opponents, Conservative Leader Dr. Robert Manion, Premier Mitchell Hepburn of Ontario and Col. George Drew, the Conservative spokesman in that province, although he left no doubt of what he thought of their bitter personal attacks upon himself. The prime minister's plea was for unity under his government whose actions, he argued, deserved a new mandate to lead the nation.

Col. Rogers' was more of a fighting speech. He took up the attacks upon the government and replied to them in detail, specification upon specification.

Long War Forecast

Rogers emphasized the government's opinion that this will be a long war and therefore a long-range organization of Canadian economic life had been planned for it.

"We have taken measures of economic control and industrial mobilization which were not adopted until the second or third year of the last war," he said. "Our military contribution, great as it is, has been only a part of a larger organization of effort, which embraces every aspect of our economic life."

Finally, date by date, Col. Rogers presented the war developments and the measures Canada had taken to meet them.

"As of this date," he said, "there are in round figures, 70,000 men under arms in the Canadian Active Service Force; over 9,000 in the Royal Canadian Air Force and over 6,000 in the Royal Canadian Navy and its volunteer reserve.

"In the face of these facts, I ask any fair-minded person if this government has failed to put forth its utmost efforts in the cooperation of our fighting forces in the common cause."

Mistakes Admitted

Responsibility for mistakes since the war started, was readily accepted by King. "It would be a miracle if the transformation of a peaceful country into a nation at war were not marked by some shortcomings, by some unpreparedness, by some shortage of supplies," he said. "But those are minor matters and shrink into insignificance when placed in their appropriate perspective beside the true magnitude of our war effort."

"Our national unity can only be maintained by a government in which there is always an intimate and generous association between French and English," he said, "and a united war effort of a united Canada, represents I believe, the heartfelt desire of the Canadian people."

French Deputies Get Reich Treaties

Paris, Feb. 7.—Members of the Chamber of Deputies were surprised to find among the printed measures distributed in the House yesterday two requesting the ratification of treaties with Germany.

One dealt with a set of sluice gates, and the other with the transformation of temporary bridges across the Rhine. The bridges have been blown up. Embarrassed officials explained that the texts had been ordered printed before the war.

Churches May Form 'Front' on Alcohol

Chicago, Feb. 7 (AP).—Editor P. R. Hayward, of the International Journal of Religious Education, reported today the Nation's Protestant churches may soon organize a "united front" to meet social and religious problems of the alcohol trade.

Hayward, of Chicago, told the International Council of Religious Education:

"Drinking among church people today affects many of the best and most devoted members and not merely a fringe of the less desirable persons, as was the case 25 years ago."

Beard to Make Bid For Release Saturday

Sam Beard, who is serving a term in Atlanta Penitentiary for running a gambling establishment here, will make a new bid for his freedom in Atlanta Federal Court Saturday.

Attorney James J. Laughlin, Washington, will present Beard's plea for release on a writ of habeas corpus to Judge E. Marvin Underwood. Laughlin contends that Beard's confinement is unlawful because his conviction was obtained with evidence obtained by wire tapping.

League Group Parley Weighs Future Course

Economic and Social Problems, Coordination, Collaboration Studied

Copyright by New York Times

The Hague, Feb. 7.—An unpretentious but significant attempt to find a means for future international collaboration opened at the Peace Palace here today. Representatives of ten countries began discussions to establish a "central committee for economic and social problems," as recommended by the Bruce committee at the last League of Nations session.

In May, 1939, the League Council set up a committee to report on the development of international collaboration in the economic and social fields. This report was studied by a second league commission and a report approved December 15.

This report recommended the establishment of a small committee to prepare the composition of a central committee. This small committee, which met here today, includes representatives of Argentina, Australia, Belgium, Great Britain, France, the Netherlands, Norway, Portugal, Switzerland and Turkey, as well as several high world court and League of Nations officials.

Discussions to Be Private

The discussions will be private but a communique will be published at the end of the conference. No striking results should be expected from the present meeting, which should be regarded as a cautious step toward a wider collaboration and coordination.

There was some hope expressed that the United States might be induced to accept membership in the larger committee, but there was no definite indication that such an invitation would be issued.

Special Police Guard

The Hague, Feb. 7 (U.P.).—A selected corps of policemen was assigned to 24-hour-a-day guard over the League of Nations delegates as a precautionary measure against possible incidents after the distribution of anti-League pamphlets throughout The Hague by the Dutch Nazi Party.

Republic Steel Appeals to Court

Republic Steel Corporation yesterday petitioned the Supreme Court to review a lower court decision upholding a National Labor Relations Board order that the company reinstate with back pay thousands of employes, who were not reinstated after the 1937 "little steel" strike.

The Third Circuit Court of Appeals last November sustained the board's order, but the company, in appealing, charged the board had given a prejudiced decision and failed to provide a proper hearing.

ticipation in the 1940 blood bank campaign, sponsored by The Post, Station WJSV and the American Contract Bridge League.

Virtually every post and auxiliary unit in the District department is joining in the drive, as well as hundreds of other organizations and individuals, the Public Printer told the conference.

The campaign's objective, to maintain and expand the Children's Hospital blood and serum "bank," also was praised at the Richmond meeting by Mrs. Betty McCrahon, chairman of the District auxiliary's child welfare division.

The George E. Killeen Post and auxiliary unit reported yesterday that the blood bank benefit party held in their clubrooms Tuesday night brought receipts of approximately $100. The program was dedicated to the memory of James A. Morris, commander of the post who died recently.

The following benefits were announced yesterday:

Luncheon bridge of the B'nai B'rith Auxiliary at 4221 Sixteenth street northwest tomorrow, with 50 guests invited.

Card party to be given on a date to be announced later by the Rhythm Rockets, the Capitol Theater's troupe of chorus girls.

Duplicate and rubber bridge party on February 19 at the Washington Golf and Country Club.

Vincent B. Costello Post, American Legion, reported 20 card parties will be held at the homes of members during the week of February 14-19. Arrangements for the benefits, which will be open to the public, are in charge of Clarence Shrout, post color bearer, of 3120 R street northwest.

Tiny Meeker and his orchestra have been engaged to play for the gala card party and entertainment which Cooley-McCullough Post No. 22, American Legion, will give at the Annapolis Hotel February 15, Charles Kohen, commander, announced. The auxiliary is cooperating for the party, to which the public is invited.

Commander Preston E. Peterson, of Washington Police and Fire Post No. 29, said March 8 has been set for that group's benefit party, which will be held in Joppa Masonic Temple, 4209 Ninth street northwest. Assisting him on the arrangements committee are Clement Murphy, Charles Rippenger, Mrs. Julia Rochford and Mrs. Margaret E. Carroll.

Naval Officer Kills Wife, Self In Hawaii Flat

Lieut. Stanish Shoots Attractive Spouse While She Sleeps

Honolulu, Feb. 7 (AP).—Lieut. George F. Stanish, 29, and his beautiful young wife, the former Constance Muriel Bell, of Tacoma, were found shot to death today in their Waikiki apartment.

Detective Capt. Benjamin Van Keuren said three notes indicated that the naval officer shot his 23-year-old wife while she slept, then killed himself. A service pistol was clenched in Stanish's hand.

(One note asked that the couple's personal effects be sent to relatives in Black Eagle. It was believed this referred to Black Eagle, Mont., home State of Stanish's parents.)

Stanish came to Hawaii last October. He was graduated from the Naval Academy in 1934.

Capt. Van Keuren said Mrs. Stanish had been shot in the head three times, and that Stanish had been shot once, through the mouth.

Lieut. Stanish was a native of Great Falls, Mont. He was a member of soccer and lacrosse teams in his third and fourth years at the Academy.

Voorhis Objects To Dies Article

very appearance of that article . . . makes it hard for the investigation not to be colored by the opinions and statements that have already been made a matter of record."

The young Californian declared that he would be "glad to get to the bottom of difficultiese in my own State," but that public pronouncements of committee members should await the committee report.

Pelley, who on Tuesday had ended his lengthy disappearance by surrendering himself to the Dies Committee, declared on the witness stand yesterday that last year he was investigated by "three sets of G-men three separate days in Asheville, N. C.," headquarters of his organization.

Justice Department Replies

He said that a Silver Shirt membership list was the only thing he failed to show the G-men in connection with his activities; and, the witness added, "it seemed to me that the FBI members who did investigate our organization more or less approved what I was doing."

From the Department of Justice last night came the immediate reply that the Silver Shirt Legion and various other organizations were investigated last year on order of Attorney General Murphy.

But, the statement added: "No official or employe of the Department of Justice has ever directly or indirectly indicated any approval of the acts or activities of William Dudley Pelley or his organization."

Starnes Objects

The examination of Pelley was interrupted once or twice when Starnes objected to questions propounded by Voorhis, who was the chairman of the Dies subcommittee appointed last fall to catch the Silver Shirt leader.

The hearing was brought to a noisy close when Voorhis was cut off in his attempt to ask Pelley to explain charges made in a Silver Shirt publication that money collected in the national infantile paralysis campaign was being diverted to other uses.

Starnes ruled that such a question had nothing to do with the committee's function of investigating un-American activities.

Attired in a dark blue suit, gray tie and gray spats, Pelley smoked a cigar as he answered questions.

"Mr. Pelley said today that he heartily approved of the committee. I wonder what has changed his mind?" queried Voorhis.

"One of the things is meeting the committee face to face," smiled the witness as the audience burst into laughter.

"Was it this changed attitude that led you to come here at this time when we couldn't get you before?" Voorhis pursued.

"It was," came the reply.

25,000 Cards Signed

After a brief executive session at the end of Pelley's testimony, Starnes announced that the questions and answers about the infantile paralysis money and about Pelley's change of heart had been stricken from the record.

Pelley, who said he was born in Lynn, Mass., 50 years ago, declared that the Silver Shirt Legion was founded in 1933 with the same purpose as the Dies Committee—to combat "subversive activities in the United States." He said he had signed "about 25,000 membership cards and estimated that the Silver Shirts had another 75,000 sympathizers.

The witness declared he had distributed an article attacking Secretary of Labor Perkins which Representative Thomas (Republican), of New Jersey, a committee member, had inserted in the Congressional Record.

Pointing out that he had written Pelley condemning him for making money out of the article, Thomas snapped that "I have yet to admire any act of yours."

"I'm very sorry; I think your work is splendid, Mr. Thomas," replied the smiling witness.

Pelley said a Col. Edwin Emerson wrote him from New York offering to put 15,000 Germans into the Silver Legion at $10 a head. Pelley said he was told that Emerson had connections with Moscow, and "I didn't care to have anything to do with that stripe of individual."

Denying that anti-Semitism was "the driving force behind the Silver Shirts," Pelley said he had no hatred for "any Jew in the United States;" but he said he didn't think there was anything wrong with segregation of Jews.

Pelley estimated that he had received $200,000 during the last eight years, of which "not more than 40 per cent" had anything to do with his Silver Shirt activities. He told the committee that he had written on "esoteric and metaphysical" subjects as well.

Acting Chairman Starnes on Monday specifically exonerated Representative Casey (Democrat), of Massachusetts, a committee member, from participation in any "plot" to destroy the committee. Casey was one of six Congressmen who attended a dinner last month at which the Dies Committee was discussed. Starnes had previously exonerated four of the other Congressional guests.

Ramspeck Bill Is Up Today

The privileges of civil service should also be extended to all employes, he concluded.

President Roosevelt also has indorsed the bill without reservations, it was learned yesterday. In correspondence on civil service problems, he urged unequivocal support of the measure.

Chief opposition to the legislation, it is believed, comes from Republican Congressmen, unwilling to "blanket in" to permanent positions incumbents chosen under a Democratic Administration.

The bill provides that noncompetitive examinations be given employes in agencies now exempt from civil service. Those who fail must be dismissed from their jobs within six months; the remainder will achieve civil service status.

Debate on the legislation is expected to continue through tomorrow.

Commission Action Called 'Arbitrary'

The Civil Service Commission's action requiring prelegal work for Government lawyers was branded "highly discriminatory and arbitrary" last night by Dr. John R. Fitzpatrick, dean of Columbus University.

In letters to chairmen of the Senate and House Civil Service Committees Fitzpatrick advocated that "the Congress of the United States should very carefully explore the entire situation with a view to making a definite announcement "on the subject."

The commission's ruling, the Columbus University dean added, is in direct contravention to the Senate-aproved Sheppard bill, now pending before the House.

Gans Is Buried As Mourners Honor Memory

All Races Join To Pay Tribute To Capital Leader

Isaac Gans, the courtly little man who was known as the "friend of all," was buried yesterday afternoon.

In the Washington Hebrew Congregation Temple gathered a crowd that reflected the motley richness of Mr. Gans' own affection. White and colored, Jew, Protestant and Catholic sat side by side as Rabbi Norman Gerstenfeld and Bishop James E. Freeman joined in paying homage to the warm-hearted civic leader.

Freeman Notes Significance

Noting the representatives of different races and creeds among the mourners, Bishop Freeman said:

"There is an odd significance to such a service as this at such a time as this."

He likened Isaac Gans to Abou ben Adhem, who told the angel to write him down as one who "loved his fellow men"—and whose name, consequently, "led all the rest." Gans, the Episcopal bishop said, was that kind of Jew, a man whose love transcended race, class and cult.

"No man was more catholic-minded, using that term in the larger sense," Bishop Freeman said. "None was more kindly, none more chivalrous. It is men like him that temper the anger of the period in which we live.

"May God multiply him in our generation."

Rabbi Gerstenfeld said that Gans' 80 years of life were eloquent of the fulfillment that comes with the richness of human relations.

"We are proud of the gentleness and graciousness of his soul," Rabbi Gerstenfeld said. "We are proud of him as a member of the House of Israel."

An American Legion honor guard saluted at the flag-draped casket. Color bearers, representing the Legion, the Veterans of Foreign Wars, the National Guard and the Salvation Army, marched past the bier and later formed a dazzling lane outside the temple when the body was brought out.

Mourners Reminisce

The pallbearers were Washingtonians whom Isaac Gans had started on their careers—Hugh F. Rivers, John H. Wilson, Jack Buckley, Louis E. Bradford, Adlai Mann, Oscar Vogel and Harry S. Wender.

As the casket was borne away to the Washington Hebrew Congregation Cemetery, knots of men lingered outside the temple to reminisce about Isaac Gans—about the poor boys he helped, about the time he wrote a sick reporter a daily letter of gossip and cheer while the reporter was in a sanitarium, about the many acts of kindness that only the beneficiaries knew about.

"Many years ago, I was taken sick," recalled George O'Connor, the troubador. "My wife got a letter from Ike Gans. He said somebody had just paid him some money which he didn't need, and he wondered whether he couldn't help with the doctor bills. Well, fortunately, we didn't need the money, but we never forgot Ike's kindness. He was always doing things like that."

Argentina Denies Nazis Beat Briton

Buenos Aires, Feb. 7 (INS).—A mystery was injected tonight into the case of a British seaman who charged he was severely beaten by four interned Germans from the scuttled Nazi pocket battleship Graf Spee.

Following publication of the seaman's story in the Buenos Aires press, British residents protested and accused Argentine authorities of granting freedom of the city to interned members of the Graf Spee's crew.

Buenos Aires police denied the sailor's charges and said he was hurt in an automobile accident.

Merchant Tells of Thrill-Packed Trip to Britain

Alvin C. Detwiler, Washington antique dealer, signed 17 documents and interviewed more officials than he can recall, in order to stay for three weeks in war-time England.

"I'm going again in June," he said yesterday, "and I hope to get around faster next time."

Detwiler returned to Washington late last month after contending with British, French and Italian admiralty, immigration, customs, police and currency control officers.

He left New York on November 25 abroad the Dutch liner Noordam, with the first American passport certified for travel in a belligerent nation after passage of the Neutrality Act. He had been told that the British visa he obtained for a European trip last summer would still be good for travel this winter. This was not the case, as he realized after spending nine days on the Noordam while she was anchored in the English Channel at the Downs, one of Britain's major blockade control stations.

While waiting on shipboard for British immigration officers to allow his entrance into England, Detwiler saw dozens of German planes overhead and heard the British anti-aircraft batteries search out the raiders. He saw a 6,000-ton British freighter, rammed by a larger ship of unknown nationality, disappear in three minutes below a fog-bound sea. He saw a British patrol boat explode a German mine with machine-gun fire, only 1,000 yards from the Noordam.

Detwiler eventually was permitted to leave the Noordam by a rope ladder. He was rowed 5 miles into the port of Deal and then driven to Folkstone, where his passport was stamped with a "W." This was a warning to all officials who might examine the document that the bearer was "under suspicion," he explained.

In London he was obliged to register at two police stations, at an air-raid precaution office and with the food rationing authorities. With the "W" on his passport, he said, "anybody authorized to look at your papers—and that means almost everybody—can ask you to explain yourself."

Last-minute cancellation of the westward sailing of a Dutch ship, just before his temporary permit to stay in England expired, forced Detwiler to fly to Paris, take a train for Italy and sail from Naples on the Manhattan.

"My main trouble, aside from not having acquired in advance a visa for war-time travel in England, seemed to be that I had an unexpired visa for travel in Germany, left over from last summer," Detwiler said. "The British officers also seemed to be suspicious of a German name—though my family has been in this country 200 years."

Civilians Asked To Round Up 'Chute Spies

Women Seek Secrets, Men Are Saboteurs, Helsinki Declares

By the United Press

Helsinki, Feb. 7.—The government tonight appealed to civilians to help round up "suicide squads" of Russian parachutists, believed to include some women spies, who are at large behind the Finnish lines after landing from big bomber-reconnaissance planes.

At the same time newspapers appealed to all civilians not having essential business in Helsinki to leave the capital because of the danger of major enemy air raids.

The landing of the Russian parachute patrols, many of them in Lapland where they have a better chance of hiding, may provide a means of assessin, for the first time the real value of this new arm of aerial warfare which the Red army originated.

Yesterday's Finnish communique indicated that Russian parachutists were at large in Finland, saying that such patrols had landed Monday in the north and that "the points where these came down are known."

Parachutists Armed

The government's appeal tonight described how to deal with parachutists, warning that they are "well armed and use their weapons ruthlessly . . ."

Civilians were told to notify military and police authorities as quickly as possible after sighting the landing of parachute patrols, giving full details as to the location.

If forests or other obstructions make it impossible to observe the actual landing, the civilians are asked to give the direction in which the parachutists descended, marking the location by houses, barns or woods.

Carry Radio Sets

It was said that those at large presumably have skis, as well as small radio sets in some instances. Most speak Finnish and are wearing Finnish army uniforms.

The women spies it was presumed, would seek valuable information and then try to escape to the Russian side of the frontier.

The men, it was said, have been assigned to such tasks are dynamiting bridges and other communications, mingling with Finnish soldiers in an effort to obtain information and spread defeatist propaganda and send information of Finnish troop dispositions over portable wireless sets.

Trade Pacts Report Slated For Today

A favorable report on the Administration's controversial reciprocal trade pact extension bill is expected today, when the House Ways and Means Committee meets for a show-down on the measure.

After weeks of hearings on the bill, Chairman Doughton called a meeting of the full committee for this morning. Voting was expected to follow party lines closely, with solid Republican opposition outvoted on the final committee count.

Committeemen informally have decided against calling the measure up in the House until hearings are published, probably the middle of next week. The bill probably will be called up on the following Monday.

A series of Republican amendments meanwhile were prepared for submission to the committee, some of which may pick up some Democratic votes.

The opposition amendments will include proposals for Senate ratification of the trade agreements, and a plan whereby either House could block the agreements by refusal to approve them.

Another proposed opposition amendment would deprive the President of power to lower, raise or bind excise tariffs.

Still another would require that before benefits from an agreement could be extended to other countries under the "favored nations" clause, the President must first make a determination as to each affected country, that United States products are not being discriminated against. The President now makes this determination after the agreements take effect.

Majority Whip Boland predicted the trade program extension measure would win by a safe margin in the House.

Representative Treadway (Republican), of Massachusetts, charged in a radio talk last night that the reciprocal trade treaty program is being used in "an unconstitutional and back-handed manner" to reduce tariffs at the expense of domestic producers.

He charged it gives the executive branch of the Government "complete and final authority' over treaties, in violation of the constitutional provision which gives Congress jurisdiction over tariffs and regulation of foreign commerce.

"This, of course," Treadway said, "is in line with the tendency of the New Deal ever since it has been in power to centralize all authority in the Executive."

Congregational Forum Hears Mission Aide

Love of God Expressed Best by Goodwill, Dr. White Asserts

The basis of Christian social action is a love of God, expressed in active goodwill, Dr. High Vernon White declared yesterday at First Congregational Church.

Secretary of the American board of foreign missions, he addressed a "Social Action" conference sponsored by the Congregational churches of the Washington area.

After the message, the Rev. John L. Mixon, head of the social welfare department of the Washington Federation of Churches, led an open forum discussion on the social action theme. Herbert Willett, director of the Washington Community Chest, Dr. White, Dr. Fred S. Buschmeyer, pastor of Mount Pleasant Congregational Church, the Rev. Arthur Elmes, Mrs. William Slade and others took part.

After a dinner in the parish hall, the men and women heard Dr. Warren D. Bowman, pastor of the Washington City Church of the Brethren; Dr. John W. Rustin, pastor of Mount Vernon Place Methodist Church, and Dr. White speak.

Dr. Rustin described the progress being made by his congregation in providing a wholesome environment for fellowship between young men and women. Unless the church provides a meeting place for Washington's youth, they will find their companionship in dangerous places, he warned.

Among others participating in the conclave were Dr. Howard Stone Anderson, host church pastor, and Mrs. Anderson; the Rev. Walter G. Borchers, assistant pastor, and Mrs. Borchers. Mr. Borchers was chairman of the meeting.

Swedish newspapers admitted that Finnish losses were extremely heavy and quoted a Swedish observer stationed near Viipuri as stating:

British Rush War Materials to Finns

Butler said. He understood "crews are readily available in Finland competent to fly any aircraft obtained."

The British were careful, however, to conceal the exact nature of aid to Finland.

"If we said we were sending so many tanks or that type of airplane or artillery weapon it would give away Finnish strategy," a military source explained, "but you can be sure we are sending manufactured articles, not raw materials."

At the beginning of her war with Germany, Britain seemed careful to avoid offending Russia, but her pledges of aid to Finland have changed that.

French demands that the Allied governments help Finland increased amid Paris press reports that Germany was seeking a Russian-Finnish peace in order to release Soviet resources for her own use.

Nazi-Russian Alliance Cited

Le Temps' editorial was typical of demands which have come from many sources, including Premier Daladier's own Radical-Socialist Party.

The newspaper said it was no longer possible to separate the European war from the Baltic conflict because of the close ties between the Reich and the Soviet and "any blow against the aggressor in Finland is against the ally and helper of Hitler and directly affects him."

Germany is leaning on Russia for effective military and economic aid, the newspaper continued, "the two forces of oppression now are only one, it is already impossible to separate them; their destinies are linked."

Jean Fabry, writing in the newspaper Le Matin, said France and Great Britain must be prepared "to arm all neutral countries that Russia or the Reich may draw into the war."

Western powers must be ready to "utilize powerfully any battlefield which may open up," Fabry added.

British assistance is not wholly altruistic, observers said, since Russian preoccupation in Finland diminishes Soviet "bogey" value in German diplomatic maneuvers, particularly in southeast Europe and the Near East.

The Allies have alert eyes in this region as was demonstrated by the meeting in Cairo today of Gen. Maxime Weygand and Lieut. Gen. Sir Archibal Wavell, French and British military chieftains in the Near East, for an inspection of defenses and review of British Indian and Egyptian troops

Turkish Loan Is Approved

At the same time the House of Commons approved an order granting Turkey a £2,000,000 ($8,000,000) loan to pay off foreign credits.

In Athens, Greece announced a new trade agreement under which France will take about $7,000,000 worth of Greek goods and Greece will import large quantities of commodities from France and her colonies. The agreement follows one between Greece and Great Britain.

Britian's drive to expand munitions manufacture was viewed as holding possibilities of increased aid to the Finns.

The Finnish Legation, apparently with Britain's blessing, is supervising an organization to facilitate the enlistment of volunteers for Finland and every day the personal columns of British newspapers are filled with appeals for gifts of medical and other supplies.

Germany Disclaims Aiding Reds

Berlin, Feb. 7 (AP).—Authorized German sources disclaimed the existence of any German-Russian military agreement and emphasized that the Soviet government had neither asked for nor been given military or technical aid in its war against Finland.

Germany is disinterested in the Russian-Finnish conflict although she has a full understanding of Moscow' position, these sources said.

This statement followed one yesterday that Germany saw no basis for mediation in the northern hostilities. Reports abroad have said Nazi military or technical aid had been given the Russians.

Germany's partnership with Russia is regarded by Nazis as a political necessity for the duration of the main European war. Active participation against Finland on Russia's side, it was conceded, would be decidedly unpopular. Germany's neutrality toward Moscow is benevolent; toward Finland, frigid.

Russia Protests to France

Moscow, Feb. 7 (AP).—Russia has protested to France against a search of the premises of the Soviet trade representative in Paris and seizure of documents and has demanded that the papers be returned, Tass, the official news agency, said tonight.

Tass said "about 100 men in mufti rushed into the premises" of Trade Representative Evstratoff last Monday and on "verbal instructions of the prefect of police" made the search.

They took away documents and broke filing cabinets and safes. Officials of the trade time representative who came to work were detained and escorted by police to their homes where searches also were effected," Tass reported.

Simultaneous searches were made of the premises of Intourist, Soviet organization which assists travelers to Russia, and a former Soviet school in Paris, the official news agency declared.

The Russian Ambassador, Jakob Surits, lodged a protest with the French foreign office the same night.

Five-and-Dime Heiress Now the Sphinx Of Palm Beach, Waiting to See Whether Danish Count Will Object to Divorce Decree

By Inez Robb.
International News Service Staff Writer

Palm Beach, Fla., Feb. 7.—The Sphinx of Palm Beach is a blonde named Countess Barbara Hutton Haugwitz-Reventlow.

INEZ ROBB

Within the next 48 hours she will either be in a position to wed her American-born fiance, Robert Sweeney, of New York and London, or to file a suit for divorce in Florida.

Unless her Danish husband files a bill of objections in Danish courts within the next 48 hours, her Danish decree, obtained 18 months ago, becomes final Friday.

But if the count should object to the granting of a final divorce at this time, the decree will not be valid for another 12 months. A Danish divorce, to become final within 18 months, must have the consent of both parties.

Should the decree become final Friday, there are reports in Palm Beach that the countess and Sweeney will make it a St. Patrick's Day wedding. The countess isn't talking. By her marriage to Sweeney, the five-and-dime heiress will regain her American citizenship, which she forfeited to become a Danish citizen.

Neither will the blonde countess talk about the possibility that she will immediately file suit for a Florida divorce if the count objects to the Danish final decree and thus holds it up a year.

Senate Committee Votes Aid To Finns; House Blocks Break

sion's isolationist attack on arms embargo repeal, before voting for the bill tried to cut the Export-Import Bank revolving fund increase from $100,000,000 to $50,000,000. He was defeated 13 to 5.

"We have a tremendous self-interest in proving to the world that it pays to pay your debts to Uncle Sam," said Vandenberg, in approving nonmilitary credit for the Finns.

"If Finland has no more right to sideration in this country than Russia, which is $392,000,000 in default in its debt to this country, then there isn't much inducement for any country to pay us."

Offered in behalf of Senator Brown (Democrat), of Michigan) (a noncommittee member), was an amendment to make a direct unrestricted loan to Finland of $30,000,000. This was defeated, 15 to 3.

Vandenberg had prepared, but failed to offer, an amendment to loan Finland an additional $5,890,000 (the amount of its payments to this country on its war debt), without any restrictions on how it was spent.

Senator Brown, author of the bill reported by the committee, will call up a similar amendment of his own in the Senate. It provides that Finland might purchase with this limited credit whatever materials it wishes, here or abroad. This part of the loan would be made by the RFC, which would be reimbursed by the Treasury. This loan would be over and above proposed Export-Import Bank csedit.

Harrison Is Supported

Senator Harrison, who opposes Government credit to Finland, received solid committee backing on his proposal for a Finnish government bond flotation here.

Harrison has a concurrent resolution that the Securities and Exchange Commission expedite clearance of any application for Finnish bonds. Chairman Jerome Frank, of the SEC, has assured the committee that the SEC normally would qualify such an issue.

Harrison, who had had many talks with Finnish Minister Procope, said he contemplates issuance of the bonds in small denominations, of around $10, to attract the small purchaser sympathetic with the Finnish cause.

Explaining the unexpected proxision for further Chinese credits, Chairman Pittman said there is great desire on the part of the Administration to advance China another loan, to be repaid by China on a barter basis.

Senator Barbour (Republican), of New Jersey, on the Senate floor, urged swift Senate action on Finnish aid proposals "without any hampering restrictions as to how and where the money should be spent." The bill provides that none of it may be used in violation of international law or for military supplies.

In the House, feeling against Russia and for Finland ran high as members heatedly debated the two McCormack amendments to sever Russian relations indirectly by refusing funds needed to maintain them.

Sent to the floor to avert the slash besides Majority Leader Rayburn were Chairman Sumners, of the House Judiciary Committee, and Representative Caldwell, of Florida, managing the three-department bill.

Representative Rayburn said the House was treading "dangerous ground" and asked members not to do anything "in a passion that might embarrass the country and involve the people of the United States."

McCormack accused the Soviet of "breaking her solemn treaties and promises."

HAPPY RELIEF FROM PAINFUL BACKACHE

Many of those gnawing, nagging, painful backaches people blame on colds or strains are often caused by tired kidneys—and may be relieved when treated in the right way.

The kidneys are Nature's chief way of taking excess acids and poisonous waste out of the blood. They help most people pass about 3 pints a day.

If the 15 miles of kidney tubes and filters don't work well, poisonous waste matter stays in the blood. These poisons may start nagging backaches, rheumatic pains, loss of pep and energy, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes, headaches and dizziness. Frequent or scanty passages with smarting and burning sometimes shows there is something wrong with your kidneys or bladder.

Don't wait! Ask your druggist for Doan's Pills, used successfully by millions for over 40 years. They give happy relief and will help the 15 miles of kidney tubes flush out poisonous waste from your blood. Get Doan's Pills.

Parliament Debates Present Relationship; Arita Is Questioned

By the Associated Press

Tokyo, Feb. 7.—The Japanese government told Parliament today that it was preparing for "anticipated difficulties" in its economic relations with the United States and was considering abrogating the nine-power treaty of 1922.

These statements were made in a session marked by pointed remarks concerning the present relations between the United States and Japan, with one member raising the question of withdrawal of Americans from China and Premier Yonai stating Japan would reconsider her attitude toward the United States if that country "continues its oppression and interference with Japan."

Discussion centered on expiration of the Japanese-American trade treaty of 1911 last January 26 after its denunciation by Washington.

Act Irks Japanese

Answering a declaration by Yoshimichi Kuboi, member of the Seiyukai, a major political party, that ending of the trade pact was "an insult," Foreign Minister Arita said the act was irreproachable legally but that the manner had caused dissatisfaction to Japan.

Tado Matsumoto, of Japan's second major party, the Minseito, asked "What does the United States request from Japan for readjustment of relations" with Japan, and Arita replied that the United States "requests the security of the lives and property of American residents in China."

"Has the government any intention to advise the American Government to withdraw its nationals from China?" Matsumoto asked.

"It is a grave question," answered Arita, "and I am not in a position to answer that here."

U. S. Warning Is Urged

"I suggest," continued Matsumoto, "that the premier issue a statement of warning to America, thereby reassuring the Japanese people."

Yonai responded:

"I do not want to regard the American attitude with ill feeling, but I will reconsider if the United States continues its oppression and interference with Japan."

Arita said the government was "weighing the advantages and disadvantages of abrogation" of the nine-power pact.

By this treaty Japan, the United States, Belgium, Britain, France, Italy, The Netherlands and Portugal agreed "to respect the sovereignty, the independence and the territorial and administrative integrity of China;" and these nations and China agreed upon the open door principle of "equality of opportunity" for trade in China.

Arita said of the treaty that "some of its provisions obviously are incongruous."

Invasion Closes China

Although technically the pact still is in force, the Japanese invasion has closed much of China to third-power trade. This fact has caused friction with the United States and Great Britain.

Parliament was told that as a result of the situation arising from expiration of the American trade treaty Japan is preparing for "anticipated difficulties" in economic relations with the United States.

"The government," said Kakichi Takeuchi, president of the cabinet planning board, "is devising methods of industrial expansion and other rearrangements in order to prepare for such difficulties, especially in importation of needed supplies."

Japan has relied heavily on the United States for such military necessities as oil and scrap iron.

Kuboi advised economic preparedness saying:

"It is a serious matter if Japan relies on the United States for the majority of her imports."

Yonai said "the government has no intention of invoking belligerent rights." It was believed the representations made by the United States concerning the bombing of the French-operated Kunming-Hanoi Railroad contained the question of whether Japan was now taking such a position.

U. S. Is Not Swayed

Copyright by New York Times

The American Government is continuing its stand that the Nine-Power Treaty is subject to alteration or abrogation only through the consent of all parties concerned; and so far as was indicated last night it is not being swayed by the debate in the Tokyo Diet.

Unlike the 1811 commercial treaty, the Nine-Power pact contains no machinery for abrogation or denunciation other than a provision enabling consultation among all the signatories, if circumstances justify.

Liner's Sinking In Irish Sea Laid to Mine

200 Passengers, Crew Saved, But 20 Are Hurt; 2 Other Ships Lost

By the Associated Press

London, Feb. 7.—The war at sea reached into a hitherto peaceful area today when the 4,305-ton Irish mail steamer Munster sank between Liverpool and Ireland after an explosion apparently caused by a mine. Her 200 passengers and crew reached shore safely, although 20 were injured by the explosion.

Meanwhile, torpedoing of the 6,805-ton British freighter Armanistan by a German submarine off the coast of Portugal Saturday was reported by Reuters (British) news agency. The crew of 53 was rescued by a Spanish freighter.

Another maritime casualty was the 1,421-ton Estonian freighter Anu, which struck a mine Tuesday night off the east coast. Six of the crew of 19 were killed, including the captain and his wife.

Captain Hurled From Bridge

The Evening News said a mine struck the forward part of the Munster and that the radio aerial was blown away, making it impossible to send distress signals

The captain was knocked off the bridge, but was uninjured.

One survivor, Able Seaman Allan Clure, of Liverpool, said the explosion was accompanied by "a blue flash and a terrific blast."

Clure said another vessel about 8 miles away quickly answered the ship's distress signal and took many aboard.

"Women and children were among the passengers and everyone behaved perfectly," he added.

A member of the crew said that the fore part of the ship was "hurled into the air and dropped back into the water with a thud.

114 Cargoes Searched

"When I last saw her she was well down by the bows with her propellers out of the water.

"We were in a lifeboat about three hours before we got alongside a collier. As the last man jumped aboard our lifeboat sank."

The ministry of economic warfare today announced that the cargoes of 114 vessels, including eight of the United States, were considered last week by the British contraband control. The entire cargoes of 90 ships were released.

The first lord of the admiralty, Winston Churchill, announced special measures would be taken to protect lightships as the result of German air attacks in which some members of lightship crews have been killed.

Fuse Found in Wreckage

Copyright by New York Times

Athens, Greece, Feb. 7.—What may be indicative of a method of attack upon Allied merchant shipping was brought to light here today when examination of the wreckage of the British steamer Tintern Abbey revealed a fragment of fuse and some clock mechanism, positively identified as belonging to an infernal machine.

The ship, which is 2,471 tons, was seriously damaged by an explosion January 29. There were no casualties.

Gold Sent to Mint; Inspector Finds No Meat For Crew to Eat

By the Associated Press

San Francisco, Feb. 7.—The Russian freighter Kim shrouded in the deepest secrecy imposed here since the outbreak of the European war—awaited fuel and supplies today while its master relayed word to newspapermen that it was "a waste of time" to seek an interview.

Only known cargo was an unofficially estimated $6,500,000 in gold, taken today to the United States Mint.

Most of the crew of 40 men and four women remained aboard.

Only a few facts came from the ship itself—that local shipping men were busy estimating the cost of contemplated repairs; that a representative of the Federal Bureau of Animal Industry had failed to find even a scrap of meat aboard and that there were no apparent arrangements to accommodate additional personnel.

The latter question arose from unconfirmed reports that it was proposed to take the 512 sailors from the scuttled Nazi ship Columbus to Vladivostok.

The 5,114-ton Kim arrived yesterday, 18 days out of Vladivostok. Its agents, General Steamship Co., said it would leave tomorrow for Manzanillo, Mexico, to load copper ore for its return trip. A dock superintendent, however, said it would be here "three or four days."

The ship was visited by the Animal Industry Bureau officer as a routine measure. It was not indicated how long the crew had been without meat.

The Kim was the first Russian boat in this port since the current war began.

Because of the announcement of the Kim's next port of call, speculation was renewed today as to whether Manzanillo was a point of transshipment of American copper destined for Germany.

Last Monday, authoritative sources were quoted at Manzanillo as saying 5,000 tons of copper had been transferred from United States ships there to a Russian vessel bound for Vladivostok. An unconfirmed report that the copper was destined for Germany via the Trans-Siberia Railroad also came to light.

An official of the Tacoma smelter at Tacoma, Wash., said 5,000 tons of copper left that port a week ago on an American freighter bound for Vladivostok.

Fritz Kuhn Is Moved To Dannemora Prison

Ossining, N. Y., Feb. 7 (AP).—Fritz Kuhn, former leader of the German-American Bund, has been transferred to Dannemora with 41 others because Sing Sing is overcrowded.

Prison attaches said Kuhn, serving 2½ to 5 years for grand larceny, complained the shift would make it difficult for his wife and lawyers to visit him.

Diplomat Finds No Excitement In Leningrad

Finnish Resistance To Collapse Soon, Russians Believe

By Walter Duranty

Copyright by New York Times

Moscow, Feb. 7.—Conditions in Leningrad are better than supposed abroad—or for that matter by foreign circles in Moscow—according to a neutral diplomat who has just spent several days there.

The diplomat, who has had more than ten years of experience in the Soviet Union and speaks Russian fluently, has traveled widely and is a keen unbiased observer, said:

"Except for the regulations against lights which are strictly maintained Leningrad's aspect is normal. The public goes about its business as usual with no signs of excitement. People there talk much more about the conflict with Finland than they do in Moscow but without pessimism or panic. Everyone seems to believe that Finnish resistance soon will collapse.

"I saw no wounded either individuals or Red Cross convoys. I was told that a majority of the cases were frostbite and not wounds.

"It is said that the Finns from the beginning have exaggerated the extent and nature of the fighting which is not so severe or bloody as they say. The Russian progress is now slow but methodical, I was told.

"The food and goods situation in Leningrad is much the same as in Moscow.

"The Leningrad population gave the crew of the ice breaker Seydoff an enthusiastic reception. Theaters and movies are running normally, also street cars and other public services. I found no evidence that any large number of people have been 'evacuated.' Train service to Moscow appeared to function regularly and I was told that reports that the Murmansk Line had been interrupted were untrue, as shown by the punctual arrival of the Seydoff crew and their relatives."

British Guard Against Reprisal By I. R. A. for Hanging of 2

By the Associated Press

London, Feb. 7.—Twin scaffolds within the grimy and fog-dim walls of Birmingham's Winton Green gaol today cut short the lives of two young zealots of the outlawed Irish Republican army and brought this bitter cry from across the Irish Sea:

"England has shown she cares nothing for the good will of Ireland! Irishmen—end England aggression!"

Tonight, in the unnatural dusk of the blackout, precautionary patrols of Britain's steel-helmeted wartime police stood emergency guard throughout the nation against reprisal by bomb—the I. R. A.'s method of attack against "oppression."

Every available officer of Scotland Yard's skilled "special branch" spent tonight on duty; government buildings in London's Westminster were guarded closely; police on extra details roved districts where I. R. A. sympathizers were likely to congregate; sentries guarded bridges, railway stations.

The employes of a number of firms in Ireland, notably at Cork, quit work and went to churches to offer prayers for the souls of the executed men.

No Disorders Yet

But the hours that followed the hangings of James Richards, 23, and Peter Barnes, 32, condemned for killing five persons in an "Irish freedom" bomb blast at Coventry last August 25, were quiet.

The new strain which the executions put upon relations between Great Britain and Ireland (Eire) were quickly reflected in a somber message "to all true Irishmen" from Dublin's Mansion House committee, calling upon them to work together to end "this aggression."

This group of prominent Dublin citizens, one of many which pleaded for reprieve for Barnes and Richards, is technically unofficial, yet bears the sanction of the office of Dublin's lord mayoress, Mrs. Tom Clarke—whose own husband was executed for participation in the Irish Easter rebellion of 1916.

After declaring that the executions of the two men showed that England cared nothing for Ireland's goodwill, the statement continued:

"Today Ireland mourns, but Ireland knows that their memory can best be served by working to achieve the ideals for which they died. Whatever may be said, the ultimate cause of their deaths is the aggression of England against Ireland. We call on all true Irishmen here in England and all over the world to rally, to stand together and to work until aggression is ended."

Night fell in Dublin, Belfast, Birmingham and London, however, without disorders.

Protest Procession Held

A small protest procession carried black flags in Dublin; sports events there and in other Irish cities were canceled; the home of Sir John Massey, British representative in Ireland, was guarded, and Tom Barry, Cork Irish Republican, called a protest meeting there for tonight.

Silent men in Belfast, capital of Loyalist Northern Ireland (Ulster), wore black armbands; girls tied black ribbons in their hair.

Richard and Barnes were the first to pay with their lives for the I. R. A.'s new campaign, conducted by bombs and terrorism, to make England "get out of Ireland."

The main goal of this campaign is the union of the six Northern Ireland (Ulster) counties to Ireland (Eire), to weld all Ireland into a "free" nation. Ulster still is part of the United Kingdom and her government is stanchily loyalist.

Eire's prime minister, Eamon de Valera, whose basic goal is the same but who has sternly repressed the I. R. A. because of its violent methods, appealed vainly for clemency for Richards and Barnes.

Pleas Fall on Deaf Ears

His appeal was part of a tide of such pleas for "mercy, if not justice," so British-Irish relations would not suffer.

All these pleas, however, fell on deaf ears. The British official stand against clemency or even delay in the hangings was hardened by a burst of bombings yesterday in which seven persons were hurt—five in London's Euston Station and two at Birmingham.

For more than a year such bombings have been frequent: In post-offices, railway stations, post boxes, subway luggage rooms. There were 291 such explosions in 1939, all attributed to the I. R. A. Seven persons were killed and 96 wounded.

The execution brought some memories of the hanging of Sir Roger Casement, Irish revolutionist, who landed on the Irish coast from a German submarine in April of 1916, allegedly bent on carrying out a treasonable plot.

He was convicted of high treason and hanged on the following August 3, after being stripped of his knighthood.

Unlike Sir Roger, however, Barnes and Richards were not accused of trafficking with the enemy. Indeed, there never have been any serious charges of connection between the I. R. A. and Britain's enemy, Nazi Germany. Instead, British official spokesmen have declared the I. R. A. was financed largely by dollars collected from Irishmen in the United States.

'His Girl Friday' Makes a Genuflection to the Press

By Richard L. Coe.

Substituting for Nelson B. Bell.

"YOU WILL SEE in this picture no resemblance to the men and women of the press of today," the title went on after flashing a preceeding sentence that "it all happened in the Dark Ages of the newspaper game, when to a reporter, getting that story justified anything sort of murder."

Such is the admonition that follows the title "His Girl Friday," which opens at the Earle Theater tomorrow morning and which was screened for a press gathering that had baited its collective breath as well as its proverbial hook yesterday afternoon.

Small wonder that the Columbia Studio issued its warning in advance of this turn-about version of "The Front Page." It was Columbia, you will recall, that made the earth rumble under the Press Building when the Lords of the Press and their Ladies viewed what Frank Capra had done to them in "Mr. Smith Goes to Washington." In this madcap whirl of newspaper life, the Hollywood boys have taken precautions and we suspect from the above, taken them with the tongue in the cheek. "If the reporters in this film are a bit daffy," the producers seem to wink, "please remember that it happened a long time ago."

Nine years ago is when the Ben Hecht-Charles MacArthur stage play first did happen and in Howard Hawks' new version, the home-desiring Hildy Johnson has become a dashing Rosalind Russell, with finger nails that seem to have no termini, but with a soul cleaner than that of the cat she played in "The Women."

Art, of course, is that fiend who wakes you up of a morning over a local radio station, but what you might not know is that Art tips the scales at something over 200. So when he begins his week as a stage performer at the Capitol tomorrow morning, the management will not be adding to its own multifarious hopes and prayers of an opening day by fretting about the strength of that organ bench.

Today's big news, as you may noticed in other columns of this page, is that Mae West and W. C. Fields open this morning in a fondly titled Western epic, "My Little Chickadee," at RKO-Keith's. While we have not previewed it, we did see the "trailer" and that sample was a perfect gem of its kind. The Mistress of the Double Entendre and the Master of the Bulbous Schnozzola seemed then to be at their best.

Amateur Life: The Pierce Hall Players opened a three-day run last night in "What a Life," the Clifford Goldsmith comedy which seemed even funnier in its original stage version than it was in the successful gelatine adaptation that followed. The Agriculture Players are doing George M. Cohan's "The Tavern" tonight and tomorrow night in the auditorium of the Department of Agriculture. Minnie Frost Rands' drama, "The Prince of Peace," is being presented Sunday evening at the Transfiguration Episcopal Church Hall.

On Washington's Birthday, in the Plymouth Theater, New York, the Group Theater will break out Clifford Odets' latest play. It is an item called "Night Music" and will have Elia Kazan, Jane Wyatt, Morris Carnovsky and Roman Bohnen in the cast. Elia Kazan brings back memories of "Golden Boy;" Jane Wyatt of both the stage and screen versions of "Lost Horizon" and Mr. Bohnen of both "Golden Boy" and the recent picturization of John Steinbeck's "Of Mice and Men." Or should.

Personal Aside to N. B. B. After one day of it, we don't see how you have whipped off a column every day for the past 17 months. Many calls and inquiries for you and all sorry to hear Those Germs have gotten you down after such a struggle. All's well—so far. Do what the doctor says and then, for heaven's sake, your readers' and our personal own, hurry up down here!

Neatly amusing are some of "His Girl Friday's" lines. When Managing Editor Cary Grant wants to describe Rosalind's new boy friend, Ralph Bellamy, Cary stammers, stalls and sputters: "Why, he looks just like that movie actor—Ralph Bellamy." And when Cary is trying to think of something that happened long ago ("the Dark Ages of the newspaper game," no doubt) he cries: "Why that hasn't happened since they shot Archie Leach." Archie Leach happens to be the baptismal name of Actor Cary Grant.

Her proudest boast is that she never bores herself. Her motto is "Never bore yourself and you'll never bore others." Her name is Elsa Maxwell.

And next Sunday evening before the Town Hall at the Shoreham Hotel, fabulous Elsa will be put to her own burning test. We'd like to be there to see if she might, in the middle of a sentence, come smack up against a yawn. What would a yawn mean from the Elsa who is never bored, from an Elsa to whom "Lohengrin's" swan must be just an inspiration for a new hat?

Anyway, Miss Maxwell will be on hand Sunday evening at 8 with her amusing remarks and her amazing thoughts. She has already followed her appearance in "Hotel for Women" with a natty film contract at Twentieth Century-Fox that has already resulted in a series of short subjects on how not to be bored. How, Miss Maxwell?

If during your visit to "The Shop Around the Corner" yesterday you were bemused by tappings and rattlings in the whereabouts of the organ console, be set at ease. All is well.

The Loew people are thoughtfully preparing for Art Brown.

She Remembers Her Don Juan

GABRIELLE DORZIAT

as the retired actress in "The End of a Day," the French film directed by Julien Duvivier at the Little Theater, she is recalling those delicate attentions that pleased a lover in his youth. Now he, too, has come to live in the Actors' Home.

The New Yorker

By Leonard Lyons

TEMPERAMENT: When the publisher of Katharine Cornell's autobiography, "I Wanted to Be An Actress," first received the manuscript, he suspected that it was incomplete—that Miss Cornell had omitted references to those temperamental outbursts which are commonplace among all actresses . . . "Surely you must have flared up sometimes," the publisher suggested. "Bernhardt did it—so did Duse. That belongs in the book" . . . "Well, I'll try to think of it," Miss Cornell promised, "and I'll let you know" . . . The next day she phoned the publisher to relate the temperamental experience which would complete her life story . . . "Once, three years ago, I told my maid to wash all the windows, and she forgot," said Miss Cornell, "and—oh, boy—did I get angry!"

ROLE: Charles Laughton, who starred in "The Hunchback of Notre Dame," sat with Groucho Marx and George S. Kaufman, the Hollywood Reporter attests . . . "Why don't you play the Woollcott role in "The Man Who Came to Dinner?" Groucho asked Laughton—who replied: "I don't think I'd be suited to it, because I'm English, y'know" . . . "So what?" said Groucho. "You played 'Capt. Bligh,' didn't you?" . . . "Many of my relatives were seamen," Laughton explained . . . "Yes," Kaufman interrupted. "—but were all your family hunchbacks?

KNOWLEDGE: Ferenc Molnar, the Hungarian playwright, dined last week at the home of Michael Todd, the producer . . . Molnar was introduced to Todd's young son, who spoke to him very slowly. "Why do you speak to me so slowly?" asked the playwright . . . "Because you're a foreigner," was the answer, "and I want to be coherent" . . . "Oh, yes, of course," Molnar acknowledged. "I understand" . . . "If you understand the word 'coherent,'" returned the boy, "I'll start talking faster."

ENTERPRISE: Random House will publish a John Barrymore edition of "My Dear Children," for which Barrymore will write a special introduction, telling his side of the story . . . Because customers who see the play have been attracted principally by the promised ad libs of the star, it will include all of Barrymore's ad libs—which were recorded by the State manager.

FAME: El Morocco had its zebra-skin motif restored Monday night, and the first patrons photographed against the new design were Jock McLean, his sister, Evelyn Walsh McLean, jr., and an elderly man who was their guest . . . The photo was dispatched to the newspapers, with the caption: "Jock and Evalyn McLean and an unknown guest" . . . The guest saw the photo and asked for a copy, explaining: "It's the best picture ever taken of me" . . . "Of course we'll send you a copy," he was told. "Please write your name and address" . . . He wrote his name: "Joseph Hergesheimer."

Louella O. Parsons'

Close-Ups and Long-Shots Of the Motion Picture Scene

Hollywood, Feb. 7 (INS).—I did a little keyhole peeking yesterday and learned, to my surprise, that Frank Lloyd is negotiating with Anna Neagle to play the feminine lead in "Tree of Liberty." If Miss Neagle signs a contract, that will mean that she will make her first picture in a long, long time away from Herbert Wilcox. I hear, on reliable authority, that Wilcox feels the script is so good that he will not stand in his star's way should she accept the Lloyd offer. And between you and me, I hear it is practically settled. Cary Grant has the male lead, so she will costar with Cary—a break for any femme star.

LOUELLA PARSONS

Since Frank Capra pulled out of Columbia, Lloyd and Wesley Ruggles are the important producers on the lot. He will spare no expense in making Elizabeth Page's novel an important picture. As many pages long as "Gone With the Wind," it has just as many characters, but it covers the revolutionary period instead of the Civil War era.

Keep your eyes on Maureen O'Hara, the Irish gal Charles Laughton brought to Hollywood as his leading lady in "The Hunchback of Notre Dame." She is one of the most delightful personalities this writer has seen in many a day. I am not alone in this belief, for letters are arriving daily from the fans asking questions about her. George Schaeffer, RKO's president, had the vision to appreciate that she is a comer, for after starring her in "Bill of Divorcement," a remake of Katharine Hepburn's first motion picture, he bought "Water Gipsies," the A. P. Herbert novel, from Hal Roach for her. Erich Pommer has been assigned the production and it will follow "One of Six Girls."

Olivia de Havilland, who has been under suspension at the Warner Studio, is pretty apt to be called back. Frank Capra has asked for her to play opposite Ronald Colman in his first Warner Brothers picture, "The Life and Death of John Doe." Anything Frank wants will be presented to him on a silver platter, for Warners are making no secret of their delight in getting the one and only Capra on their lot. The red velvet carpet has been spread for him and the best is none too good. As we exclusively announced, the Colman deal is all but set and the picture will be started in a very short time.

Snapshots of Hollywood collected at random: Herbert Marshall is looking for a house and he and Lee Russell will not wed until he moves into his new domicile; Ricardo Cortez, so disturbed over our line that he was out stepping with Lillian Bond that I wonder if he and his estranged bride will reconcile. He says he never met Miss Bond until that night and merely danced with her; Conrad Nagel very devoted to Gladys Ehlerman at Sardis where they were lunching. She is well-known in radio circles; Countess Dorothy di Frasso's emerald earrings the talk of the town, they are so chic and different. She wore them at the dinner the Samuel Goldwyns gave for Victor Sasson, Hollywood's millionaire visitor; saw more people I haven't seen in ages at the cocktail party Frank Hunter and Paul Levison gave Jack Krindler of 21 fame at the Beverly Hills Hotel. Ruth Taylor and Paul Zuckerman here for a month greeting old friends. Phyllis Brooks, pounds heavier, flitting here and there; Priscilla Lawson, so pretty; Wendy Barrie all done up in a gray sports dress, and Arleen Whelan a picture in black velvet.

Jessica and Dick Barthelmess arrived late—Jess enthusiastic over her new shop; I talked with Peggy Fears, A. C. Blumenthal, Edith Gwynn, the Paul Lucases and dozens of others. Suzanne Brewster chaperoned by Steve Hannigan, chatting with Danny Winkler, who finally flew in from New York after being grounded several times; Mae Sunday hostess at a cocktail party for Mrs. Ria Gable, who returned yesterday after several months in the east; Mervyn Leroy, who has been laid up with the flu for five days, hopes to return to the studio later in the week. Meanwhile, Woody Van Dyke is pinch-hitting for him on "Waterloo Bridge;" John Kirby's "sweet music" Negro band opens at the Troc Friday night; George Brent, whose romance with Ann Sheridan was never hotter, leaves for Honolulu in two weeks; Eddie Goulding, who has been terribly sick, his friends are happy to hear, had a better day yesterday; George Raft and Norma Shearer dining with Norma's mother at Victor Hugo, created plenty of interest.

That's all for today. See you tomorrow!

In Hollywood

With Hedda Hopper

Hollywood, Feb. 7.

The success of "Grapes of Wrath" and "The Blue Bird" have convinced Darryl Zanuck that the public doesn't want cheap pictures. He has some staggering plans for next year. And now he's plotting to get Spencer Tracy for the part of Brigham Young and I hope he succeeds. I can't see any other person in it. Strange, with all those wives, that Brigham Young wasn't terribly interested in women. And I wonder if they'll be allowed to put on the screen that scene where Young used to go down the corridor and mark an X over the door of his favorite for the evening. But if one of the other wives saw it first, she'd erase it and put an X over her door. I doubt if Mr. Hays would allow this bit of history to go on the screen.

HOPPER

Nelson Eddy opens his concert tour by singing Shelley's "Ode to a Sky Lark" which has been set to glorious music by Albert Hay Malotte. I don't know how important the Sky Lark is in your life, but to me it's a sort of salvation piece. In the crash of '29 when my house of profits tumbled, like a somnambulist I went through the house until I located a book of English verse, read the Sky Lark twice, then a third time with understanding. Was able to laugh about the Hopper landslide and began all over again. And when I heard it sung the other night, all these memories trooped back. Incidently, Nelson's been voted the matinee idol of Australia for the third year via the island's leading magazine The Woman.

Elsa Maxwell has received, or will in the next few days, word from Alan Corelli, secretary of the Theater Authority, in New York, that any parties she runs in that city in the future will be under Theater Authority rules and regulations the same as any other benefit—that a portion of the proceeds be turned over to actor's charities or no stars will be permitted to perform without being fined!

Virginia Van Upp tells me about the 4-year-old boy who had to model clothes at one of our fashion shows. He was furious and finally tore off everything, stood looking at himself and said: "The heck with modelling. I'm prettier this way."

'Tobacco Road' Winds Into the National Again

Long-Run Drama and Three New Films on Next Week's Bills

"TOBACCO ROAD." The sixth engagement and the seventh week of Jack Kirkland's record-breaking play in Washington will begin Monday evening at the National Theater. John Barton, who played Jeeter Lester on the play's last two visits here, again heads the family of wretched sharecroppers. Since this city last saw the play, the New York company has surpassed the record held by Anne Nichols' "Abie's Irish Rose." Sara Perry, Sheila Brent, Eugenia Wilson Dick Lee, Lillian Ardell, Edgar Hinton, David Houman, Walter Ayres and Pitt Herbert are the players. As has been the custom in recent visits of the dramatization of Erskine Caldwell's novel, popular prices will prevail. Matinees Wednesday and Saturday.

RKO-Keith's

"MY LITTLE CHICKADEE." Mae West and W. C. Fields are costarred for the first time in this new Wild West epic. Titled after Field's expression of benevolent approval, this new release concerns a cafe singer whose exploits in a frontier town of the 1880s include a marriage to Mr. Fields, the reformation of the town criminal through the softening processes of love and the giving of beauty hints to the local school mistress. Donald Meek, Fuzzy Knight, Dick Foran, Ruth Donnelly and Margaret Hamilton are in the supporting cast. "West Wall," the chief short subject, details the geographical theater of World War II, with special attention to the Maginot and Siegfried Lines. Opens this morning.

Capitol

"REMEMBER THE NIGHT." Fred MacMurray and Barbara Stanwyck have the leading roles in this light comedy which concerns a district attorney who falls in love with the girl he hopes to send to prison. The climax blossoms at the Indiana homestead of the law-enforcing hero. Beulah Bondi, Elizabeth Patterson and Sterling Holloway have the chief supporting roles. Producer Gene Ford's new stage revue is titled "Dance Crazy" and features a group of leading knock-about dancers. The Three Sailors and tall Melissa Mason are the leading people in the company, which also includes the Standlers, ballroom dancers; Al Gordon and his canine Racketeers and singer John Nichols. Opens tomorrow morning.

Earle

"HIS GIRL FRIDAY." This newspaper yarn costars Cary Grant and Rosalind Russell with Ralph Bellamy as the fretting insurance agent to whom Miss Russel's girl reporter is engaged. How the managing editor calms his excitable reporter forms the plot. Helen Mack, Ernest Truex, John Qualen, Gene Lockhart, Roscoe Karns, Abner Biberman, Porter Hall, Clarence Kolb, Frank Orth, Cliff Edwards and Frank Jenks are the other players. "Red" Skelton holds over for his fourth and final week as master of the Earle stage ceremonies. His associates will include Betty Bruce, who danced in "The Boys From Syracuse;" Emmett Oldfield and Eddie Ware, Gregory, Raymond and Cherie and the Roxyettes in three new dance routines. Opens tomorrow morning.

Palace

"GONE WITH THE WIND." The most widely-discussed film of recent years continues into its third week on F street. The morning showing at 9:45 and the afternoon showing at 2:45 are on a continuous basis, with no seats reserved. All evening performances at 8 p. m. and the Sunday matinees at 2 p. m. are reserved and may be booked at the box office. Clark Gable, Vivien Leigh, Leslie Howard and Olivia de Havilland and Hattie McDaniel have the leading roles.

Metropolitan

"MUSIC IN MY HEART." Tony Martin, the popular singing star of radio, makes a great step forward in this slight backstage story of the networks and immigration laws, continuing at the Metropolitan. Andre Kostelanetz directs his celebrated orchestra in his novel arrangements. Rita Hayworth, Edith Fellows, Eric Blore and George Tobias are the principal players and the songs include "Punchinello" and "Prelude to Love."

Columbia

"BALALAIKA." Nelson Eddy and Ilona Massey return to F street in this screen operetta after a week at the Capitol. Miss Massey is making her first important screen appearance since her successful debut in "Rosalie" and Eddy plays a Cossack hero of the nobility. Charlie Ruggles, Frank Morgan, Lionel Atwill, Dalies Frantz and Walter Wolf Woolf King are featured. Opens tomorrow morning.

Little

"THE END OF A DAY." This French film, directed by Julien Duvivier, continues at the Little. It relates the story of retired actors, their remembered triumphs and their lost hopes. Louis Jouvet, Victor Francen, Michel Simon and Madeleine Ozeray are the leading players. English subtitles accompany the French sound track.

Belasco

"OLYMPIA." A record of the last Olympics held in Berlin, this carefully photographed film continues, detailing the athletic events of the international athletic meeting. Slow motion is frequently employed to reveal the fine points of the action and not the least interesting aspect of the film is the camera's record of the excited crowds.

Trans-Lux

"INFORMATION PLEASE." The third release in this popular new series of screen short subjects features as its guest expert Clarence Budington Kelland. Harriet Parsons' "Screen Snapshots" concerns the studio lots. "Men of the Alps" embodies a trip through Switzerland and "The Ugly Duckling" is the Disney cartoon. News reels predominate. Opens tomorrow morning.

Gayety

"JAZZ BABY REVUE." Marlene and Zorita are the stars of next week's burlesque presentation at the Gayety Theater, opening Sunday afternoon. The principal comic will be the familiar "Bozo" Snyder. "Nick, the Greek;" Murray Briscoe; Joyce St. Claire, Diane King and a youthful dancing chorus are among the featured performers.

Howard

THE FOUR INK SPOTS are the principal performers in the Howard Theater's new stage presentation. Recording and radio favorites, the Four Ink Spots are particularly noted for their version of "If I Didn't Care." Teddy Hill's band and Pegleg Bates are the supporting attractions. The new bill opens tomorrow morning, and reserved seats are on sale for the Saturday Midnight Jamboree. The screen attraction stars Jane Wyman and Dick Foran in "Private Detective."

Atlas

EDMUND LOWE, who has been a top-ranking screen figure for the past decade, becomes one of the most noted stars to appear on the stage of the Northeast house. Lowe's most famous role, that of Sergeant Quirt in "What Price Glory," catapulted him into an unending line of screen hits that included "The Cisco Kid" and "Dinner at Eight." Gaye Dixon, songstress, and Motter and Davis, acrobatic duo, are the featured performers. Opens tomorrow.

Children's Theater

"RIP VAN WINKLE." The Clare Tree Major group's fourth presentation of the season will be given Saturday morning at the National Theater. Mrs. Major's telling of the Washington Irving legend is designed especially for children and is to be played by a cast familiar to Washington's younger generation of theatergoers.

Tax Liens Name Hopson and Kin

New York, Feb. 7. (AP).—Howard C. Hopson, a dominant figure in the giant Associated Gas & Electric System, several of his relatives and a number of his personally controlled companies, were named today in tax liens for $2,664,954.

The liens were filed in Federal Court by James J. Hoey and Harold Hickey, internal revenue collectors of the Second District of New York City and the Albany district.

The Associated Gas & Electric Co., top holding concern of the system, recently filed for bankruptcy in Federal courts.

At the height of his power, Hopson's empire controlled properties with assessed valuations of almost a billion dollars. He once testified before a Senate committee that he and his family drew profits of $3,187,000 from Associated Gas between 1929 and 1933.

Lynching Bill Political Move, Connally Says

Texan Scores White, Committee Witness, For Attacking Members

By the Associated Press

Charges of election year "political pressure" over antilynching legislation were hurled back and forth yesterday before a Senate Judiciary subcommittee conducting hearings on the bill recently passed by the House.

Senator Connally (Democrat), of Texas, opponent of the bill, twice protested at demonstrations by spectators, most of them colored, saying at one point that "it looks like the committee is going to be lynched." Senator Van Nuys (Democrat), of Indiana, chairman, warned the spectators against demonstrations.

Testimony by Walter White, secretary of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, that some members of Congress were using "vitriolic attacks on legislation like this" to gain reelection brought cross-examination by Connally.

Senator Connally asked White if he ascribed these political motives to the late Senator Borah for his speech against the antilynching bill at the last regular session of Congress.

Replying in the negative, White added that he preferred not to discuss the motives of a Senator recently dead.

Other questions by Connally brought a protest from Senator Wagner (Democrat), of New York, a sponsor of the bill, that Connally was not permitting the witness to answer fully.

This caused the Texas Senator to protest that "I heard this man (White) detail all this sewage and I don't concede the right of the Senator from New York to censor my questions."

Chinese Celebrate New Year Today by Aiding Homeland

Washington's Chinatown—the 600 block of H street northwest—stirred itself slightly yesterday, for an old year came to its end.

Today begins a new year, the twenty-ninth since the establishment of the Chinese republic, somewhere in the fifth millennium of the old dynastic calendar. But while China is fighting for her life, celebrations of her sons and daughters in this country can be neither joyous nor elaborate.

In the great third-floor hall of the On Leong Association, at 620 H street northwest, a solitary Chinese was lighting incense to purify the air, and arranging white flowers in great cloisonne vases. Across the road in the back room of a restaurant sat Sing Shew, president of the association, adding up accounts.

Sing laid down the paintbrush with which he had been sketching patterns in the account book and explained the situation.

"We make no dancing, no decorations, we save money to send the poor in China," he said. "We have party with Chinese music and light wine—not strong drink. We have food and Chinese candies, welcome all our American friends. You come, bring your friends," he invited.

The party will be Sunday, from 6 p. m. to midnight, because today "we all work," he said. As for the funds sent to China periodically for civilian relief, "that is doing all right," he said.

Sing didn't know the number of the year that begins today. "It is more than 4,600 years," he said. "China is an old country, you know. That is when Confucius lived, more than 4,600 year ago. According to tradition, Chinese must pay all their debts before the new year begins.

3,080 Votes For Browder

The candidacy of Earl Browder, general secretary of the American Communist Party, gave piquancy to Tuesday's special election to fill the vacancy in the Fourteenth New York Congressional District. And there was a faint trace of truth in the pre-election statement of the Communist Daily Worker that "the eyes of all America" were centered on this "first electoral test of the American people's reaction to the new war and hunger program of the Roosevelt Administration."

The final tabulation of votes, as placed before "the eyes of all America" yesterday, was Edelstein (Democrat), 12,962; Lefkowitz (Republican), 6,665; Browder (Communist), 3,080. Comrade Browder, in other words, secured not quite 14 per cent of the votes cast, in a district which contains the Communist Party headquarters and has probably a higher concentration of "Reds" than any other in the country.

The debacle of Mr. Browder's Congressional campaign is the more pronounced because of the supreme and well-organized effort made by the Communists in a short-term election which the major parties did not seriously contest.

He had the ardent support of a newspaper — The Daily Worker — which is skillfully edited but utterly unscrupulous in its pro-Communist policy. He had the assistance of a large and enthusiastic corps of volunteer workers; the advantage of contesting a district in which the lot of many voters is anything but enviable; the asset of being able to pose as a martyr because of his recent conviction for passport frauds. And Mr. Browder also enjoyed the protection of the American spirit of fair play, which provided him with radio time and saw that his speeches were free from the heckling which the Communists themselves employed viciously against the other candidates.

Both the scrupulous safeguarding of Mr. Browder's rights as a candidate and his smashing repudiation at the polls are cause for national congratulation. The creed for which he stands has nothing but destruction and ruin to offer. But this will be realized most clearly if its leaders are allowed to air their grievances and voice their muddy thoughts without restraint. As The Daily Worker sadly confessed yesterday, it was difficult to explain to East Side voters that the Soviet-German Treaty is not a Nazi-Communist alliance, and it was not easy to overtake the "lies" which depicted the Russian aggression on Poland as an invasion instead of as an act of "liberation."

On New York's East Side, and elsewhere, a generous measure of rope is all that is necessary to have our Communists hang themselves neatly, efficiently and permanently.

Mr. Pelley Appears

In its report to Congress last month, the Dies Committee indicated an opinion that William Dudley Pelley, the Silver Shirt leader, is of sufficient significance to merit special attention from a body charged with the investigation of un-American activities.

Yet it was not until this week, and then only as a consequence of Congressman Hook's much-discussed speech in the House on January 22, that Pelley made his first appearance before the committee. He came primarily to testify that letters allegedly bearing his signature, which Congressman Hook had cited in that speech, were forged. His testimony, on top of other evidence, has now convinced Mr. Hook that he was seriously deceived. So the Michigan Congressman has apologized to Mr. Dies, the committee and the House and has asked that his remarks of January 22 be expunged. The affair of the forged Pelley letters is over.

Of more immediate importance is the testimony as to his organization which may be extracted from Pelley on the stand. It can hardly be said that the committee has demonstrated either great efficiency or zeal in bringing him before it. The Silver Shirt leader was evidently not as inaccessible as the committee let the country believe. His appearance in Washington this week, without the compulsion of a subpoena, proves that.

The Dies Committee has rendered a most valuable service by exposing a wide variety of un-American activities. The suspicion exists, however, whether well or ill founded, that it has been more zealous in putting the spotlight on subversive elements with a foreign tie than on those of native origin. There has been far more talk at committee hearings of Communist fellow travelers than of Fascist dupes.

The Dies Committee can now balance the scales. It can begin with a thoroughgoing investigation of William Dudley Pelley, whom it has already described as "a racketeer engaged in mulcting thousands of dollars annually from his fanatical and misled followers and credulous people." And Pelley of the Silver Shirts should be followed on the stand by other individuals who have used the mantle of superpatriotism to foster bigotry and race-hatred, and who so far have strangely escaped the committee's spotlight.

Pointing The Moral

Washingtonians have good reason to be pleased by the furor which Mrs. Roosevelt and other public-spirited citizens have raised over the shocking conditions existing in many of the city's welfare institutions. At last the community, and some members of Congress, are awaking to the fact that, in point of community service, the Nation's Capital is close to being a national disgrace.

It would be a grave mistake, however, to assume that this outburst of sentiment in favor of "doing something" for Blue Plains, the Children's Receiving Home, the Industrial Home School and similar institutions will automatically lead to constructive results. An intelligent social policy involves much more than new or renovated buildings and adequate equipment. The modern tendency is to place more emphasis upon expert case work and upon care for unfortunate individuals in their homes than upon the construction of bigger and better institutions.

Out of the present urge to overcome neglect of the past some serious mistakes might easily arise. Successful social policies are not developed by sudden visits to long-neglected institutions, to be followed by quick enactment of remedial legislation. Nor, in the case of the District, can such policies be achieved by five-year plans for improvement of physical plants. Certainly there is no hope in merely shifting inmates of one crowded institution to another equally crowded.

The five-year program for "renovation, reconstruction and new construction" of of "District properties" suggested by the District Commissioners after a hasty visit to the Home for the Aged and Infirm is more irritating than impressive. The Commissioners know that, under the present system of local government, five-year plans are not worth the paper required to prepare them. Such programs, as the Board of Education learned long ago, are consistently ignored by Congress. And there is no reason to suppose that a public-welfare program would produce any better results so long as continuity in the District's policy-making body is utterly lacking.

There is a pathetic note, too, in the statement of Col. McCoach, speaking for the Board of Commissioners, that all institutions and departments in the District are "probably" in need of some improvements. Do the Commissioners know as little of all these other institutions as they appear to have known of Blue Plains? Their belated efforts to work out a program before a Congressional investigation of the Home for the Aged gets under way serves chiefly to emphasize the need for a new local government.

While this problem is being worked out, plans to overhaul public-welfare institutions ought to proceed with caution. There can be no question as to the need for a new Children's Receiving Home and for more adequate care of the aged at Blue Plains. But a suddenly devised general building campaign for welfare institutions might not produce the most beneficial results in the long run.

In the field of child welfare, for example, an extensive survey of the District's needs has been completed in recent years. But Congress has granted only $37,000 of the $280,000 needed annually to put this program into effect. Aside from a small Receiving Home building, the greatest need in this field is now for more intensive case work. For the enlightened objectives of the program are to prevent delinquency, and to return children to their own homes, or foster homes, with only a minimum of institutional training, where that appears to be necessary.

Moreover, the Board of Public Welfare has funds to carry out an expert study of all the District's institutions for children during the next two years. That study should point the way to modernization of institutional care in line with the preventive work now being done. Pending the development of a more comprehensive policy in dealing with all welfare institutions, the most effective results can doubtless be achieved by following through these constructive programs already outlined and by making tentative improvements where basic guide lines are still lacking.

In any event, the whole problem is tied up with the creation of a genuine District government that will be competent to tackle these problems as an American city should.

Fruits Of The Gallows

The legal execution of two members of the Irish Republican Army in Birmingham yesterday is certain to cause profound repercussions in Anglo-Irish relations. Events alone can prove whether or not it was the part of political wisdom for the British cabinet to disregard the appeals for mercy that poured in from all Ireland and from such diverse representatives of Irish opinion as Premier De Valera, the pacifist playwright Sean O'Casey, the Protestant Archbishop of Dublin and the editor of the Unionist Irish Times.

There is no doubt that in his refusal to consider any reprieve for the condemned, or any commutation of their sentence, Sir John Anderson, secretary for home affairs, had the approval of the vast majority of the British public.

British opinion, indeed, would have been indignant and outraged had his decision been otherwise. A nation which is locked in a life-and-death struggle cannot afford to be complacent over efforts to stab it in the back. Of the guilt of these two Irish gunmen there seemed scarcely a question. They had been fairly tried before a civil court, and one of them had admitted himself an accessory to the bomb explosion which cost the lives of five innocent people.

In the circumstances, official mercy would certainly have been interpreted in Germany as proof of an inherent weakness of the British government. Perhaps it would have been so interpreted at home.

But the enemies of England also stand to benefit by the executions. Instead of intimidating the I. R. A., the gallows at Birmingham may have strengthened its cause and weakened the Irish parties that abhor its methods. To suppose otherwise is to underestimate the power of fanaticism and to ignore the emotional attraction of even a twisted type of martyrdom.

In Ireland it may now seem of secondary importance that these men were found guilty of an atrocious and cowardly crime, or that their actions served to give great aid and encouragement to the enemies of the empire. The latter, at least, could be said of the Easter insurrectionaries of 1916.

In that tragic Easter week, the volunteers commanded from their countrymen no more sympathy than the I. R. A. commands today. Living, they seemed merely fatuous idealists or dangerously irresponsible fanatics. But when the smoke from the volleys of the British execution squads had cleared from the prison yard, the leaders of 1916 became invested with the awful and irresistible grandeur that surrounds all who die for Irish freedom. Those volleys awakened in Ireland a militant nationalism that all the power of Britain could not extinguish.

So it may be that the rope that broke the necks of Barnes and Richards will also break the prestige of the De Valera government and with it the fading hopes of a real Anglo-Irish peace.

Setback For The Service

In the current issue of the American Foreign Service Journal, a semiofficial organ published by the American Foreign Service Association, there is a closely reasoned plea for the appointment of more career men to the highest American diplomatic posts.

"In a world rudely disturbed by economic as well as political whirlpools," says the Journal, "a world that is subject to more cross-currents daily, the need for specially trained and practiced representatives in key posts is increasingly obvious to the public."

The point is well taken. It is a disturbing coincidence, therefore, that close on the heels of this plea the post of American Minister to Bulgaria has been given to a noncareer man, former Gov. George H. Earle of Pennsylvania.

Bulgaria happens to be a country seemingly remote from American interests. At the present critical juncture of affairs in the Balkans, however, it happens to be an extremely important listening post. And whatever Mr. Earle's gifts may be it is obvious that he lacks the training necessary for the job. His appointment to Sofia is thus a setback for the foreign service, more particularly since the post of American Minister to Bulgaria has recently been occupied by a succession of able career men.

"Mr. Ernest Brown crystallized the unemployment problem when he told Parliament that it was really a question of finding jobs."—Oxford (England) Mail. Our own Calvin Coolidge was briefer. "The cure for unemployment," he said, "is plenty of work."

We shall pay no heed to the Presidential candidate who promises us two cars in our garage, but we'd cock an attentive ear to one who assures us that he'll somehow see to it that we get the wherewithal with which to buy gasoline to run the one car we have.

Now they are saying Benjamin Franklin wasn't frugal, and that he stole most of those wisecracks which paragraphers have been stealing from him for, lo, these many years.

Help For Finland

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Millions of people in this country are much disturbed by the attack on Finland by Russia. Finland is making a heroic resistance, but she needs airplanes, antiaircraft guns and ammunition. To get these she must have money.

Finland is fighting for the principles of government which in this country we hold so dear. If she falls the other democracies of northern Europe will fall. For this reason the United States and all other democratic countries should send her aid.

Congress is slow to act, even in the matter of a nonmilitary loan, and there does not seem to be any possibility of its making a loan which could be used for military supplies. I therefore offer the suggestion that all admirers of brave little Finland send some contribution, however small, to the Minister from Finland at Washington, D. C., to be used for the defense of his country. JAMES E. IVES.
Washington, Feb. 5.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Our economy in not lending Finland a substantial sum right now is going to cost us heavily within a few years. It is going to cost us a hundred times the small loan she asks of us now.

If Finland wins and her neighboring peace-loving countries are still thereby intact America will breathe more easily. Democracy in Scandinavia will still be standing.

If Finland loses, Sweden and Norway will probably be next to be trod under by Russia, with Germany's help. And if this takes place, regardless of the outcome of the Allies, we must reckon with a more powerful and enveloping barbarism.

A victorious Russia in the case of little Finland will mean that we must increase our Navy and all patrols in this hemisphere in preparation of defense against the greedy and bloody hands that prey upon those who try to live in peace and prosperity.

Czech Autonomy

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In his broadcast of the night of February 2, news commentator R. G. Swing made the statement that, in the so-called "protectorate of Bohemia and Moravia," the Czechs were given a large measure of autonomy.

That is what they were promised, in March of 1939. But, like most other Nazi promises, this one also proved to be worthless; and the whole Czech governmental machinery in the Czech territories is merely window dressing, intended only to deceive the Czechs and the rest of the world. But the Czech people are not deceived by this window dressing, though there appear to be some persons in the rest of the world who do accept it at face value.

The fact is that the Czechs have not a vestige of self-rule left, and Nazi rule is as complete and absolute in the Czech provinces as it is in Germany itself. For, at the elbow of every Czech official there is a German "assistant" or "substitute," who must approve every measure which goes out from that office. And this German "assistant" is the real administrator in that office.

Furthermore, the aim and purpose of German rule in the "protectorate" is the same as it is in Poland, namely, to remove the Slavic population by one means or another and to make "lebensraum" for Germans. And while there has not been such wholesale killing off of the Czechs as has been reported from Poland, in other respects there is little difference in the measures which have been adopted, or in the ferocity and ruthlessness with which they are carried out.

Indeed, reports have recently reached this country of a 12-point Nazi "work program" by which the Czech population is to be completely wiped out, so that within a comparatively few years this people will be but a historical memory!

Mr. Hamilton And The Youth Congress

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: It is a serious question whether or not the chairman of the Republican National Committee has exhibited another of those chronic miasmas which so clearly unsuit him to be the executive head of a great political party in these changing times. Like many others in that party he has not yet caught up with events and is still living in the 1920's.

On the other hand, it is also a serious question whether or not the American Youth Congress is not pretty much what it has been represented to be not only by the reports given to the Dies Committee but by other well informed authorities.

The best evidence of its extreme leftism is in the resolution passed in New York City only the other day which declared, in effect, that Russia had a perfect right to invade and conquer Finland. Any group which condones or approves Russia in any of the methods customarily used there to maintain internal power and discipline and beyond its borders upon other peoples can and should be condemned as unmoral, irreligious, un-American and ignorant. And by that measure we can gauge the leadership and aims of the American Youth Congress.

Its questionable attitude is again evidenced in the demand it has made and is making for subsidies to provide jobs for those who cannot secure them for themselves. Here again it truckles to the New Deal and the Communist philosophy that the state is the universal alma mater which should supply everything for everybody. If its leadership was American in cast it would raise ructions with the government for not setting the stage so that capital would be taken out of the banks and put to work and that industry would require the services of these young people at much higher wages and with greater chance for advancement and material progress than can ever come out of New Deal doles.

It might well take a lesson out of the memorial recently executed by a powerful group of American Federation of Labor leaders, who can certainly never be accused of being pro-Republican, but who are fundamentally pro-American and who recognize the necessity for perpetuating our Anglo-Saxon civilization.

Mr. Hamilton, with his consummate flair for doing the wrong thing should have secretly welcomed the opportunity the invitation gave him of sending his No. 1 power orator to address the American Youth Congress and overwhelm it in a presentation calculated to controvert the political and social theories with which these young people are being indoctrinated. You must fight fire with fire and not in absentia.

Complains Of Disrespect

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: You have heard and undoubtedly will hear in the future numerous complaints and indignations registered by "service men," of the Army, Navy and Marine Corps, but their protests should be heard by everyone.

The treatment received by the "service men" during the present era from the "civilian population" is intolerable, undignified, disgraceful, and disgusting. It seems as though the "service men" are afflicted with a disease or are contaminated, because the people of this fair land are doing everything in their power to avoid them.

This is very noticeable in cases where a soldier, sailor, or marine enters a store to make purchases. Very little attention or service is paid to these men.

Before any man is accepted by the Army, Navy or Marine Corps he must pass a rigid physical and mental examination to determine his physical fitness and mental ability. Upon completing the examination he must submit names of reputable citizens for character reference. A thorough check-up is made as to the applicant's history and social standing in the community where he resides.

It is, therefore, quite evident that any man fulfilling the requirements mentioned above is a healthy, normal, and reputable citizen. The Army, Navy or Marine Corps does not desire the services of any man who does not meet their demands.

Do the readers realize that the "service men," are the foremost and most loyal protectors of their country? Do the readers realize that these men are ever ready to protect and defend their country from foreign invasion? They are ready to help the needy in emergencies and catastrophes; yes, these men are willing to lay down their lives in order that they may protect the people of this great and glorious country.

Perhaps the readers of The Washington Post can enlighten us as to why the soldier, sailor and marine is no longer treated with the respect that he is so very much entitled to. SERVICE MEN.
Washington, Feb. 5.

Party Politics

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The great Grover Cleveland clearly realized that if a democracy hopes to survive, the people, not the self-seeking politicians, must rule. He despised bureaucracy, loose fiscal policies, not to mention greedy groups seeking to force half-baked ideas into conservative, stable minds. Cleveland was crucified by the spendthrifts of his period, who refuted reason, resorting to feverish emotion in the endeavor to promote monetary inflation. He stood like a great rock for sound, economic, political principles, which principles remain.

Grover Cleveland said, "We proudly call ourselves a government by the people. It is not such when a class is tolerated which arrogates to itself the management of public affairs, seeking to control the people instead of representing them. Parties are the necessary outgrowth of our institutions, but a government is not by the people when one party fastens its control and perpetuates its power by cajoling and betraying the people instead of representing them."

The Post Impressionist

Walt Whitman's House

Where in Washington is the house in which Walt Whitman—printers' devil, compositor, carpenter, country school teacher, editorial writer, publisher, tramp, hospital orderly, Federal employe, and immortal poet—resided?

Oldest inhabitants, who pride themselves on knowledge of familiar haunts hereabouts, may, if put to question, fail to answer. Yet the house still stands at 1407 L street northwest, somewhat as a patriarch, eying meditatively the changes of passing time.

Circumstances have decreed it a drab dress—pebble-bespattered and coated gray as if it wished to wear a hoary cloak out of deference to its age. Defiantly it holds its place with neighboring surroundings as modern buildings rise to greater heights beside it.

Whitman came to Washington during the Civil War as a lodger to cast his talents for appraisement before a strange audience. His residence was no sacred shrine to the literary celebrities of the city in the seventies, eighties, or nineties, nor has it become so even to this date. Although much altered in appearance from the orginal structure, it is none the less the humble abode that once sheltered the greatest American poet since Poe. No tourists visit it; no bronze tablet, nor even a wooden sign mark the spot. It is one of the houses of another age.

The "good gray poet" entertained a modest idea of values about his quarters. Writing friends back in 1863, he disclosed he was paying $7 a month for a "bright little third-story front room." A fellow lodger in the house, however, described Whitman's apartment as "a third-story hall bedroom." Happenings have given this house a degree and, as long as progress permits it to stand, its fame, song-like, will linger on as the place where Walt Whitman once lived.

William Douglas O'Connor, a New England journalist, author, and civil servant, whom Whitman met two years earlier in Boston, fathered him upon his entry into the National Capital. Although the poet was then nearing the half century cycle, yet he needed guidance and companionship amid unfamiliar surroundings.

While critics, and those skilled in the science of individual appraisement, have awarded Whitman placement in the hall of fame for men of letters, still interest will always exist locally because of a sidelight on his life. He was for a period one of Uncle Sam's employes, back in an era when job-getting was not, as today, at a premium. His first assignment was in 1862, then at the age of 42, and the job came as reward for his distinguished and humane service as a nurse during the Civil War, coupled with the good offices of his friend O'Connor.

Biographers describe the position as "desk space in the War Department where he could earn a little money copying documents." He next qualified as a clerk in the Department of the Interior, and this place he held for two years. It was the occasion, historians tell, for Whitman's masterpiece, "When Lilacs Last in the Door Yard Bloom'd." He subsequently advanced to the Department of Justice, where for 18 months he was one of the army of Federal workers of that period, who, as at present, consider 9 to 4:30 p. m. the mortgaged-for-work hours of each week day.

Up to this time, a signal magic marked his progress and lack of employment was not, as 'tis said, "in the cards." One day disaster dawned. He incurred the ill-will of a section chief, and, according to the record, he lost his position as "the author of a scandalous book." Strict allegiance to the standards which should invest a Government worker seems to have been rigidly invoked by an administrator.

Had the poet been endowed with less sturdy ancestry, being now 46 years old, the thought of age might have been overpowering. He might have slumped into despair and lapsed into history as one of the nonproducers in the age bracket. In shaping the remainder of his career, he did not wait for life to come up to him but went out to find it—in streets, omnibuses and ferries; at beaches, markets, levees, barrooms, sidewalks and cemeteries. He was, according to the late Haywood Broun, the first of the inquiring reporters.

Then came the insistent urge to find his niche—a place where unrestricted and unhampered he might give expression to the innate dictates of his imagination and emerge as a noted weaver of words. In reaching so exalted a goal, his reason counseled that success often comes about alone, but stabilized success owes its permanency to a counselor.

Again the star of destiny smiled upon him. He encountered John Burroughs, noted naturalist. That this association was profitable is best attested to by the fact that, in a public vote last year, Whitman carried off philatelic honors, and his image will adorn a postage stamp to be issued February 20. Few Federal workers, no matter what their achievements may be, can hope to share a similar distinction ere the knell of service is sounded. For more than 30 years after taking rank in the "over-40" group, Whitman made writing an obsession and set an example for those who, when overtaken by adversity, hold that the jig is up.

Today And Tomorrow

By Walter Lippmann

Pot And Kettle

IF MR. ROOSEVELT has been correctly reported as saying that state, county and city indebtedness has decreased in direct ratio to the increase in the Federal debt, he must have caused great pain to his economic advisers. For as Mr. Dewey pointed out promptly and effectively the total local indebtedness has decreased very little in the past seven years whereas the Federal debt has increased greatly. The statement attributed to Mr. Roosevelt is just not so, and, if he made the statement, he must have misunderstood what his advisers told him.

LIPPMANN

What almost certainly they must have told him is that in the Twenties local debt was increasing rapidly whereas Federal debt was declining; in the Thirties, on the other hand, local debt has been stationary and slightly declining while Federal debt has been increasing. The Twenties were a period of Federal retrenchment and local expansion; in the Thirties practically the whole expansion of government activity was financed by the Federal government. In the Twenties the extravagance was local and in the Thirties it has been Federal. Thus a considerable part of the increased Federal debt replaces what would have been an increase of local debt.

The President's advisers probably told him that another part of the increase of the Federal debt replaces some of the increase of private indebtedness in the Twenties. As Mr. Dewey pointed out, private indebtedness has fallen some 17½ billions since 1932; for a good many of these billions of private debt there has been substituted Federal debt.

Great Depression Halted Financing

THE PROSPERITY of the Twenties was financed by a great increase of public and private indebtedness, that is to say by public loans to states, counties, and cities, by private loans to farmers and home owners and builders, by loans to corporations, by instalment credit, and by foreign loans. The great depression stopped all this financing. It has never been resumed on anything like the scale of the Twenties. Such recovery as we have had has been financed, not by local and private borrowing, but by Federal and public borrowing.

The question which the New Dealers have to answer is why this Federal financing has not brought a full recovery. The question which their opponents have to answer is whether in the absence of Federal financing, there would have been enough local and private financing to cause a full recovery.

Credit Inflation Bolstered Prosperity

THE GREAT POINT for everybody is that in both periods there was an increase of indebtedness. The local and private debts of the Twenties led through prosperity to a crash. The Federal and public debts of the Thirties have given us a partial and an uncertain and unsatisfactory recovery. The problem is whether the country can achieve a genuine recovery without the private credit inflation of the Twenties and without the Federal credit inflation of the Thirties. For there has been no prosperity in the post-war era which was not accompanied by, and was not dependent upon, a great increase in debt of one kind or another.

The post-war world was never stabilized at a satisfactory level by the mere exchange of goods and services and the investment of savings. There have been so many barriers to normal commerce and so many deterrents to genuine investment that throughout the period prosperity has had to be sustained artificially by credit inflation. This was done in the Twenties by bankers, promoters, corporations, and local governments. In the Thirties it has been done by Federal action. But never since the other war has the economic system been made to work without pumping into it inflationary credit of one kind or another.

Neither Side Gives Light On Problem

MR. ROOSEVELT throws no light on the real problem by showing how much better off we are now than we were after the crash which ended the Twenties. His Republican opponents throw no light on the real problem by denouncing the prosperity of the New Deal and carefully ignoring how their own prosperity ended in a crash. A debate of this sort merely justifies the wag who has been going around Washington telling people that the Republicans have shown they could produce a depression which was too big for the Democrats to cure.

The question which needs to be examined is why in the whole post-war period, under Republicans and Democrats alike, prosperity and a satisfactory level of employment have required a large amount, in one form or another, of credit inflation. The answer to that question is not easy to give. But an honest effort to find the answer in the great structural dislocations and disorders of our era will induce a certain humility, and make the pot less ready to call the kettle black.

Fair Enough

By Westbrook Pegler

Patriotic Atheists

I HAVE BEGUN to doubt the wisdom of confronting every organization and all individuals with a disavowal of communism and fascism and saying, in a leering way, "sign here." That practice encourages the loathsome patrioteer to drape the flag around him like a shawl and go around putting people on a spot who are better citizens than himself.

It contains an insinuation that the organization or person in question is a doubtful case and that compliance is a sign of cowardice or refusal a sign of sedition. Of course, every loyal American hates communism and fascism and, on proper occasions, takes the oath of allegiance with dignity and solemn feeling and is willing to take it again, as the officers of the military establishment and public officials do.

Once sworn the oath would seem to be binding unto death, but for some reason it is thought to have a term and, like vaccination, to require renewal, every now and again. Still, people don't object if the circumstances are such as to justify the ceremony, as in obtaining a passport, enlisting or joining a patriotic organization.

BUT NO MAN or woman should be required to stop dead in traffic and repeat the oath for anyone who takes it upon himself to go on the prowl of traitors, and the same resentment occurs when, in a public gathering, some loudmouth fraud says, "We are now going to sing 'The Star-Spangled Banner,' and any dirty traitor who doesn't get up will get such a going-over that he will never get up."

There is a time and place for everything, and, although patriotism is never really out of place, organizations and people have other business besides denouncing communism and fascism. Anyway, Americans have a right to believe in communism or fascism. We can forbid actions but not beliefs, and we have laws and police to take care of situations in which persons who so believe—for the two beliefs are practically identical—attempts to overthrow the Government by violence. To me belief in these "isms" seems inconsistent with Americanism, but the Constitution doesn't see it that way, and there is no profit in destroying the Constitution just to beat someone else to it.

Nobody enjoyed more than I did the embarrassment of the Youth Congress last summer and the more recent confusion of the Student's Union when they were confronted with resolutions against communism, but there are other ways of ascertaining where organizations and persons stand.

THERE IS NO LAW by which any group can be compelled to adopt any resolution, and none should be penalized for exercising its rights. If a group or individual is following a line, Communist or Fascist, that will become plain in time without our resorting to tricks.

Fortunately, in these cases the resolutions were introduced by members and were pertinent business, but it can easily be foreseen that the application of such tests can become a terrible nuisance if not a menace.

For here we have a violent, organized propaganda to the effect that all citizens who are not Christians of the most conventional, church-going type—which also means, incidentally, the showering- down type or kosher-keeping Jews—are necessarily atheists, and therefore enemy aliens.

Now, a man has a right to be an atheist, and he may be an atheist and a reactionary Republican at the same time. Or a man may be a Christian in his own heart, according to his own interpretation of Christianity, but not a church Christian—and, in fact, an opponent of churches—and still be a loyal, law-abiding American. Or a Jew may abandon his religion and be a capitalist and a loyal citizen.

BUT IF WE COME to the point of admitting that unbelief in religion or nonattendance at any church is proof of communism and somehow punishable, we are on the way to an inquisition and the establishment of a religious racket under Government sanction. In that case a man could be challenged on the street by any hot-eyed fanatic to declare his belief in religion and show his church credentials, paid up like a union card, and mauled around or jailed away as an enemy of the state for failure to affirm.

The right to be a Christian is established and respected everywhere in the United States, but the right to be an atheist is equally important. The assumption that an atheist is a Communist and therefore a conspirator against the American Nation is false. And it should be added that a patriotic atheist does a little more than his share as a citizen, in view of the fact that he pays taxes right along to carry the heavy load imposed on all the taxpayers, including infidels, by tax-exempt church properties.

Earle Is Appointed Envoy to Bulgaria

David Gray, Uncle Of Mrs. Roosevelt, Minister to Eire

President Roosevelt yesterday named David Gray, of Florida, an uncle by marriage of Mrs. Roosevelt, to be Minister to Eire.

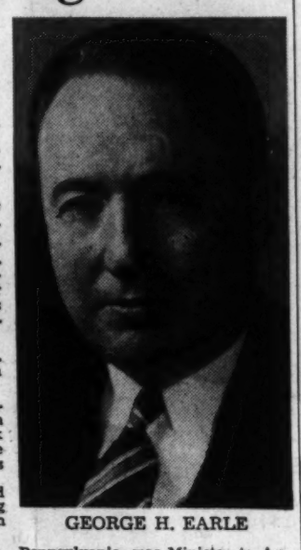
At the same time he made the long-predicted appointment of former Gov. George H. Earle, of Pennsylvania, to be Minister to Bulgaria.

Louis G. Dreyfus, jr., now Minister to Iran, was nominated Minister to Afghanistan. The three names were sent to the Senate for confirmation.

Gray is a native of Buffalo, N. Y., but recently has made his home in Florida.

He is a graduate of Harvard University, class of 1892, and over a period of years did newspaper work in Rochester and Buffalo. He is the author of several books and plays and also is a practicing attorney.

It the World War he was awarded the Croix de Guerre while serving as a captain in the aviation section of the Signal Corps.



GEORGE H. EARLE

Earle, who has been actively supported for a diplomatic post by Senator Guffey (Democrat), of Pennsylvania, was Minister to Austria for a time before his election to the governorship.

Randolph Hits 'Greedy' Soviet, Advocates U. S. Sever Relations

Orchardists Hear Congressman Say Reds Have Broken Every Pledge Made to Nation; Van Metre Named Head of Fruit Growers

Special Dispatch to The Post

Martinsburg, W. Va., Feb. 7.—Assailing the Kremlin's 'greedy and inhuman practices,' Representative Jennings Randolph tonight advocated the withdrawal by this country of recognition of Soviet Russia.

Addressing the annual banquet of the West Virginia Horticultural Society, the Second District of West Virginia Congressman declared that the Soviet has broken every pledge made to this Nation at the time of recognition.

"The Sovieet government hsa interferred in our internal affairs," he stated. "It has directed from Moscow organizations in this country which are attempting to overthrow our Government. It has failed to pay on its war debt. Its purchases and trade with this country have decreased.

"America should serve notice by severance of relations that we do not propose to do business with a country which has greedy and inhuman practices designed to include the United States in its plan of aggression."

The Congressman also advocated the establishment in every community of a "New Citizens Day" designed to create a better civic spirit among youths reaching voting age and aliens becoming naturalized.

Senators Robert A. Taft, of Ohio, and Rush D. Holt, of West Virginia, also were scheduled to speak tonight.

W. D. VanMetre, of Petersburg, Grant County, was elected president of the horticultural society. The two-day session closes tomorrow. He succeeds James E. McDonald, this county. VanMetre had been vice president. E. Lee Goldsborough, of Shepherdstown, Jefferson County, was named vice president. Goldsborough was "king" of the apple harvest festival here two years ago. Carroll R. Miller, this city, was renamed secretary, and Malcolm M. Brown, this city, renamed treasurer.

First-day attendance ran close to 500, setting a record, officials said. Routine discussions occupied today's session. President McDonald urged full cooperation in Federal and State soil conservation programs; Dr. L. P. Batjer, of the USDA station at Betlsville, Md., reported encouraging results from use of nathalene acetic acid spray for retarding the apple drop; Dr. R. B. Dustman, head of the agricultural chemistry department of West Virginia University, reported progress toward finding a spray to heighten color of apples but said it had not reached the point for commercial use yet.

The Once Over

By H. I. Phillips

Miami Beach Summary

Give me a combination of Venice, Brooklyn, Hollywood, New Orleans, the Hanging Gardens of Babylon, Luna Park, Paris, Bali Bali and a revolving floor and I will give you Miami in midseason.

I was here in the boom days when a man with a hatful of damp sand could get $1,000 a grain for it with riparian rights. I was here through the winters when the real estate operators were slowly regaining consciousness, but still muttering, "No, a 50-foot lot like this only 9 miles from the ocean is worth $350,000, and I can take no less." I was present through the years when Miami Beach picked itself up and staggered forward, doing pretty well through the bottom of the depression and dazzling the unbelievers with its growth from 1933 to last winter.

But I have never seen Florida look, act, talk, sleep, breathe and drink so much like its abnormal self as it is doing this very minute despite the somewhat lower temperatures this year.

It is one of the few places on earth where people shake each other by the hand and exclaim: "Boy, you look all in! Ain't it wonderful?"

All conversations touch on that noble animal—the horse that wins—and man's best friend, "the dog that never comes second."

Sturdy captains of industry, who, when back home, think Seabiscuit is purely a pastry product, are not in Florida a week before they are standing on chairs calling nags by their first names and begging them to bring home "shoes for baby;" leaders of the Citizens Union movement on a vacation from the campaign to rid the home town of gambling barely get off the train before they are thumbing through the form charts in a frenzied determination to pick a long shot.

Grandma, who wouldn't play bridge for money back among her own people, has Dog Form delivered to her bungalow with the morning milk, and spends most of the day doping out a daily double.

The mailman has a good thing in the third, the gardener slows up in his hedge-clipping to figure out a winner in the fourth, the grocery store clerk will give you his feedbox specials with the oatmeal and any drug clerk in town will slip you a 10-to-1 shot on rye or white bread.

A burglar leaves your wallet and jewels and takes your Racing Form.

Even a fisherman talks in racing terms, and will explain his failure to land a 200-pound sailfish with a disgusted, "I was ahead all the way to the eighth pole, but collapsed in the stretch run."

On a round of golf you miss your caddie and find he has taken a cross-country gander to find out if his three-horse parlay went over.

It is cockeyed, childish, incoherent, pagan and screwloose. It is swift, incredible, dippy and crazy. But it is also beautiful, glamorous, tropical, picturesque, eye-filling, dazzling, comfortable, lovely and swell. And that goes in any kind of weather, hot, cold or medium.

Sequence Of Events

By Mark Sullivan

Roosevelt Railing At Calendar

THE EVENTS having to do with a third term compose a pattern. The pattern is determined by certain dates. As these dates approach, they put compulsion upon President Roosevelt to decide. Or, lacking frank decision by him, the decision is in effect, made for him.

SULLIVAN

The most important dates are those of the primary elections, which extend from March 12 in New Hampshire, to May 28 in Texas. Aside from these dates fixed by law, are certain other dates, movable within limits—the dates of the national conventions, and of the meetings of the national committee, one of which, the Democratic, has just taken place in Washington. Study of these dates throws light on the matter of a third term.

A good way to study the sequence is to go back some 12 years—back to the last occasion on which a President in office was serving a second term, and a question arose as to whether he should have a third term.

Coolidge Spoke 11 Months Ahead

THE PRESIDENT was Coolidge. He had served part of a term through having been Vice President when Harding died. He had then been elected to a second term, a full one. As the end of this approached, he took steps about the matter of a third term.

August 2, 1927, Coolidge gave out a laconic statement in Vermont idiom, "I do not choose to run for President in 1928." That was 11 months preceding the national convention that would select the next Presidential nominee. If Mr. Roosevelt had been disposed to enlighten the country, as early as Coolidge did, he would have spoken last August.

Coolidge's "I do not choose" was too Yankee a locution to be completely clear. Some thought it cryptic. Coolidge was urged to speak again. He waited until the meeting of the Republican National Committee, December 6, 1927. To that meeting, Coolidge said:

"My statement stands. No one should be led to suppose that I have modified it. My decision will be respected. After I had been eliminated, the party began, and should continue, the serious task of selecting another candidate from among the number of distinguished men available."

The meeting of the Republican National Committee, at which Coolidge made that statement, corresponds to the meeting of the Democratic National Committee that was held this week. (Although this Democratic meeting was two months later than the Republican one of 1927.) If Mr. Roosevelt were willing to make a declaration like Coolidge's, he would have spoken last Tuesday. The fact that he did not speak has strong significance.

Senate Even Voted Against Third Term

EVEN AFTER Coolidge's repeated statement, talk of a third term continued. The Senate took notice of it. A resolution was introduced by Senator La Follette the younger. It read:

"Resolved, That it is the sense of the Senate, that the precedent established by Washington and other President of the United States, in retiring from the Presidential office after their second term, has become, by universal concurrence, a part of our republican system of government; and that any departure from this time-honored custom would be unwise, unpatriotic, and fraught with peril to our institutions. . . ."

There was prolonged debate. Ultimately the resolution as here printed was adopted, 56 to 26.

Of the Senators who voted for the resolution; that is, against a third term, in 1928, 20 are still in the Senate:

Ashurst (D) Ariz.	Norris (Ind.) Nebr.
Barkley (D) Ky.	Nye (R) N. Dak.
Capper (R) Kans.	Pittman (D) Nev.
Frazier (R) N. Dak.	Sheppard (D) Tex.
Glass (D) Va.	Shipstead (Fl.) Minn.
Harrison (D) Miss.	Smith (D) S. Car.
Hayden (D) Ariz.	Thomas (D) Okla.
King (D) Utah.	Tydings (D) Md.
LaFollette (P) Wis.	Wagner (D) N. Y.
McKellar (D) Tenn.	Wheeler (D) Mont.

Pressure Increases On Mr. Roosevelt

INCIDENTALLY, among the embarrassments Mr. Roosevelt's course is threatening to his party, consider the cases of the 15 Democrats and also Senator Norris, of Nebraska, who opposed a third term on principle in 1928. What would be their position if Mr. Roosevelt should now be a candidate for a third term?

The date of the Senate resolution against a third term was February 7, 1928. That date corresponds to the present week. It is likely a similar resolution, perhaps in the same words, will be introduced in the present situation.

Inexorably the march of events puts increasing presure on Mr. Roosevelt, puts him more and more in the position of equivocation, and brings increasing embarassment to party leaders. The presure on Mr. Roosevelt will rise to special acuteness on the dates of those State primaries in which candidates for the Presidential nomination are required to make statements avowing their candidacy. Mr. Roosevelt may rail at newspapermen for asking what he is going to do about a third term. But it will do him no good to rail at the calendar, and time. Time is like Ol' Man River, "he just keeps rollin' along."

Lewis Accuses A.F.L. Counsel

By the Associated Press

John L. Lewis offered "documentary proof" to the Senate Labor Committee yesterday that A. F. of L. proposals to amend the Wargner Act were prepared with the aid of attorneys for "reactionary and anti-labor" corporations.

The C. I. O. leader's exhibit appeared in a long statement presented by Philip Murray, C. I. O. vice president.

It charged that Joseph A. Padway, A. F. of L. general counsel, prepared the federation's amendments after a "series of secret conferences" with Gilbert M. Montague, of New York; Earl Reed, of Pittsburgh, and Ernest S. Balllard, of Chicago.

The three attorneys were described by Lewis as Representatives of "many corporations which have been the most flagrant and notorious violators of the National Labor Relations Act."

Lewis listed 14 companies which, he said, were represented by Montague, Reed and Gallard.

"Old Stuff," Says Green

Miami, Fla., Feb. 7 (AP).—President William Green and Counsel Joseph Padway of the American Federation of Labor today denied charges by John L. Lewis that A. F. L.-proposed amendments to the Wagner Act were prepared with the aid of attorneys for "reactionary and antilabor" corporations.

Both Green and Padway declared the charges by Lewis, presented before the Senate Labor Committee today, were "old stuff," that they had been submitted by Lewis to the same committee a year ago and subsequently had been denied by the federation.

Andrews Hits Labor 'Hitlers'

Pittsburgh, Feb. 7 (AP).—Assistant United States Attorney General M. Neil Andrews declared today "the ranks of labor have been invaded by men who would do credit to Mr. Stalin or Mr. Hitler" and "neither the C.I.O. nor the A.F.L. will do anything about it."

"Both sides are afraid if they do anything, the leader will just take his membership over to the other side," he told the American Legion Post.

Andrews, special prosecutor in charge of the Government's investigation of building costs here, blamed "labor racketeering" for the bid-rigging conspiracy for which 57 contractors, union leaders and corporations were fined yesterday.

The conspiracy to defraud the Government through collusive bidding on PWA-financed projects cost taxpayers "several hundred thousand dollars," he said, adding:

"It all sounds pretty horrible to just state it . . . and after all these businessmen had just come under the domination of other groups, some of them more sinister than you can imagine. It's a shame that responsible businessmen must be involved."

Short Wave Programs Of Britain Cut Off

London, Feb. 7 (AP).—Some of the British Broadcasting Company's short wave programs, including those of America, were cut off for 45 minutes tonight. It was stated officially the interruption was caused by a "technical fault." Home services were not interrupted.

Legal Residences Affect D. C. Juries

The fact that 65 to 75 per cent of those employed by the Government within the District have voting residences outside the District complicates the task of selecting juries here, the Rotary Club was informed yesterday by Judge Oscar R. Luhring of the District Court. He spoke at the club's weekly luncheon at the Hotel Willard.

Of the 130 jurors selected for service this month, only 15 are Government employes, he pointed out. Only residents of the District are eligible for jury service.

Most of Judge Luhring's talk was a description of the operation of the jury-selection system.

Air Rules Called Safety Yardstick

Air regulations are the "yardstick for measuring flying safety," Ben Z. Redfield, associate aeronautical inspector of the Civil Aeronautics Authority, told the Aircraft Owners and Pilots Association last night.

Redfield, who spoke at a meeting at Greenbelt (Md.) Airport, also stressed the value of the CAA's flying course designed to train safe pilots, raise the standard of fliers and expand aviation activities.

Gil Robb Wilson presided.

They're Wearing These Fetching Hats Now

By Marshall Adams
The Post Fashion Editor.

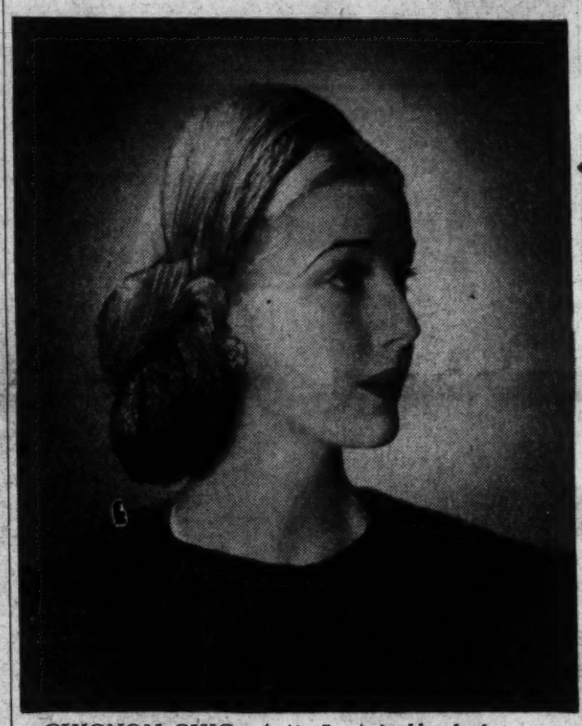
FEBRUARY presents one of the greatest headline problems of the year to fashionable women. Straws look corney and season-rushed at present, while their old dark felts now droop almost as disconsolately as their midwinter spirits. Perfect answer then comes in the form of something gay, bright and rather frivolous, either a confection of flowers, feathers or veiling.

Here are three examples of the smartest and most varied styles that women of charm and chic are wearing to cocktails, luncheons or bridge. All are by noted designers, developed along the lines and thought peculiar to each artist's taste. None of the silhouettes or methods of trimmings are alike, yet all bear out a single theme—feminine enchantment.

Lilly Dache's soignee French hand is seen to good advantage in her turban pictured on Anita Louise's porcelain head. It is the same line of turban that started a whole new school of hats last fall. G. Howard Hodge, famous for years for his belief that women must be glorified, not just streamlined, is represented here. He has endeared himself to the film colony, especially to Virginia Grey shown in a Hodge original.

FEATHER FLATTERY
—Designed by a man, Harryson, but eminently feminine is the pastel tinted feather toque, above, clouded in dotted veiling. A springlike touch with winter coats, and obviously the type of lofy, important-looking little hat to make a woman appear more gracious and important.

PETTICOAT FLOUNCE
—This G. Howard Hodge midseason hat is of black felt, ruffled with silk straw and ensnared with a net veil.



CHIGNON CHIC—Anita Louise's blonde hair gets tucked into this Lilly Dache "Chignon-turban" of cornflower colored silk gauze, interesting for dinner wear.

First Cousins Who Wish To Wed Should Know Own Ancestry

By Logan Clendening, M. D.

"Do you believe that if first cousins marry they take a chance of having mentally unsound or physically deformed children? As I look at it from my study of biology, first cousins take no more chance than any other young couple who wish to get married. I find this especially holds true when there never has been in the history of our ancestors any intermarriage, as in our case."

Answer: I assume you are asking me a very personal question, a question that concerns you. And you have analyzed the elements so far as science can interpret them very well. As you say, first cousins who marry take no more chance of having deformed or mentally unsound children than any other found couple, provided they know their own ancestry. It is true that hereditary diseases are likely to be increased geometrically by the marriage of first cousins. On the other hand, wholesome qualities of people are liable to be increased by such a union. Only the contracting parties can decide how important the evidence is.

What is trichomonas infection?

The trichomonas is a small unicellular parasite. It is found quite frequently in the human intestine—with great regularity, indeed, when the gastric juice is diminished. Sometimes it changes from its harmless role and becomes troublesome. It may then cause diarrhea or other digestive upsets. In infants this occurrence is much more serious than in adults. In girl babies the trichomonas may enter the genitals and cause itching and discharge. In rare instances this occurs in adult women.

In the intestinal infestations the trichomonas is quite readily killed by the use of enemas, and the employment of a drug. The treatment of the vaginitis in girl babies is by warm water douches and local drug applications. The skin should be protected by a thick soothing ointment.

Is the new treatment for pellagra proving successful?

One of the great American endemic diseases, pellagra, is under control. Constantly afflicting the under-privileged population of the Southern States, it has been observed for 50 years. It consists in a state of bad nutrition with sore tongue, diarrhea and scruffiness and eruption of the skin. Long believed to be a nutritional disorder, it is now virtually proved that it yields to the use of nicotine acid.

Under the use of nicotinic acid practically all cases of pellagra are restored to normal with almost magical rapidity.

Lively Games Pep Up Parties

HOW to have a bang-up party? Get some peppy games and capers, stir them together with an idea. And for a sure-fire idea a "Turn-Back-the-Clock" party can't be beat.

Ask guests to wear at least two articles of childhood attire—or, when the crowd arrives, dress up the boys with little caps and with Eton collars cut from cardboard. Give the girls big but cheap hair ribbons.

And to get the crowd off to a hilarious start, play "It's Plain To Be Seen" or "Peekaboo."

In this favorite nursery stunt, you first hold up some small object such as a key for everyone to see. Then send out all your guests except one. He's to use his ingenuity in putting the object where it can be seen but isn't obvious—on top of a mirror perhaps.

Now call the gang back to search. Whoever catches sight of the object squeals "Peekaboo." quickly sits down on floor or chair, tries hard not to give the secret away. Last to discover it is the booby—he gets a dunce cap.

Your crowd of "kids" will love mystifying tricks, too—and how they are baffled when you stand an egg upright on a cloth-covered tray. Anyway, that's all anyone sees—the egg, tray and cloth. When imitators try to stand the egg upright, too, they fail—and your secret's safe.

To know how to play this and dozens of other exciting games for all kinds of parties, see our 40-page booklet, "Games For Good Parties." Has peppy ice-breakers, team games, tricks, fortune stunts to keep the fun bubbling from the minute your party starts till the last guest goes home!

Send 15 cents in coins for our booklet, "Games For Good Parties," to The Washington Post Home Institute, 109 West Nineteenth street, New York, N. Y. Write plainly your name, address and the name of booklet.

The Inventory

IT IS the day you have set aside for taking stock of all your small concerns. For getting your desk straightened, for cleaning your bureau drawers, for looking over your wardrobe—oh yes, and for clearing out your handbag. For throwing aside all the antiquated letters, clippings, magazines, boxes, favors, souvenirs etc. For assembling a pile of discarded garments for the Salvation Army. For getting organized on a new, smooth running basis, for extricating yourself from a chaos of trifles so you can really accomplish something.

The whole bright long day stretches before you—the day you have been saving for weeks. Perhaps if you get everything finished by early afternoon you'll even have time for a walk . . .

NOW WHAT shall you start on? . . . The desk, of course. You have been carelessly stuffing paper in the drawers, piling magazines on top against this day of reckoning. You begin to plow through the magazines. Heavens! Here's one for August! Now why did you ever save that? . . . You turn the pages. Oh yes, that article on "WHAT WILL HITLER DO?" . . . You had meant to read it later.

And say—what is this? . . . "HOW TO PLEASE MEN WHEN RIDING ON A TROLLEY." . . . How on earth did you ever miss that? You stop everything, begin to read avidly.

Resuming your inventory, you pick up a neatly folded section of a Sunday newspaper. Now why on earth—oh yes that war map! . . . That was in September.

You investigate a booklet issued by a life insurance company . . . Why, there are all those figure exercises you had meant to do! You become absorbed in the ones on sitting posture . . . find yourself trying them out

AN HOUR later the top of your desk is in perfect order—still overladen, but neat. You tackle a drawer full of letters. Shall you keep them—or not? . . . Oh, well, you'll glance over them hurriedly and just keep the ones that are especially interesting . . . and that would be nice to read some rainy day in front of a fire in some country house when you are very old and have nothing to do.

Why, here's one written last Easter! From Maude! In Bermuda! You begin reading . . . So much of it seems strange and new! You remember now—you read it so hurriedly and had meant to look over it later.

Here's one from Arthur . . . of May 15 . . . The last time you heard from him! And you both thought you'd write so often. Well, men are all like that. And yet—well, when had you written to him? For that matter, when had you even thought about him?

You open the letter . . . He no longer is a shadow. . . You hear his voice . . . see his face. . . Dear old Arthur! There are a lot worse men than he is! You must sit right down and write him a letter—just as soon as you can find time.

Here is a letter from Mother, fat with clippings from the home town paper. They seem entirely unfamilar . . . you were too busy to read them at the time . . . Now whose picture is that? . . . Why Alf Nitter's—of all people! And he has been made a police commissioner!

YOU READ on and on in the letters . . . decide to keep all of them. You look at the clock. Lunch time! Why—why where has the morning gone? And you have only the top of the desk and one drawer in order!

How tired you are! Your legs are cramped, your lungs clogged with dust. . . . Well, you'll rest a little while, then eat your lunch. You look ruefully at the results of your morning's work. Oh, well, after lunch you'll really sail in and finish the desk . . . and tackle the bureau drawers . . . and clean out the closet . . . and sort all the clippings . . . oh yes and clear out your handbag!

Trip to Washington With Stars Induced High State of Delight

POSSIBLY to most of you the recent joyous commotions which attend the President's birthday benefits are as dead as last Friday, but I am still in a high state of delight over my experiences of January 30, which took me to the great city of Washington under very remarkable conditions for me.

Alice Hughes

One of my dearest pals is Ona Munson, the Belle Watling of "Gone With the Wind" and costar with Edward G. Robinson on that Tuesday night radio show. Well, practically before I can count ten I am on the train to the Capital with Ona and Eddie and Mrs. Eddie, where they are going to display themselves at the birthday parties along with the rest of the big posse of movie actors there, and also get off their broadcast between routs and revels. So there am I in the Nation's mecca, racing through streets behind motor cops, sneaking through hotel kitchens so the actors could miss the crowds out front, and standing in the wings while they said a few words from the stage. This was a most unusual experience for a quiet reporter who covers Main street, New York.

My pair made at least a dozen stops, and we were always running in to the rest of the glamorites—Tyrone Power, Olivia de Havilland, Jimmy Cagney, Dorothy Lamour and others of the herd. The big belt came when Steve Early, bless his soul, got me into the White House for the President's broadcast with the actors, and while I didn't exactly sit on His Excellency's knee, like Charlie McCarthy or J. P. Morgan's midget, I was within a few feet of one of the most charming men of his time as he made his winning little speech. What with all these bows and scootings there was no time to munch, and we liked to starve until the Gold Plate breakfast, which came off at 2 in the morning. How on earth do these movie people stand the gaff, anyway?

Well, the Nation is in for a treat now that Tornado Tallulah Bankhead has finally ended a local run of 408 shows in "The Little Foxes."

Brenda Frazier Pleases Milliners By Wearing Hat

MILLINERS are smiling broadly, for Brenda this-and-that Frazier is going in for hats, after a long spell of bareheadedness. She has just bought three chignon turbans from one of our leading hatters, so maybe there is hope for the hat business after all.

Your Figure, Madame!

Foods Containing Protein Necessary In Reducer's Diet

By Ida Jean Kain

YOUR DIET is not something you go on occasionally. It is what you eat every day. It is good for you or bad for you. And it is either building up or lessening your vitality.

Diet has done an about-face from the old idea of "no food with your meals" and the inclusion of certain foods is now being stressed. That is fortunate, for these foods are vitally important to you and, regardless of what you are trying to do about your weight, they should be left in the menus. They safeguarn your vitality.

You will notice that the daily slimming menus always contain protein foods. The portions of meat, fish, eggs and milk may seem large for a reducing diet, but you need exactly the same amounts of these foods while reducing as at any other time. It has been ascertained that we need from 10 to 15 per cent of our normal calorie requirement in the form of protein. You take chances with your health by leaving them out of the menus.

Items Protect Health

If your diet were supervised by a dietitian in a weight clinic, she would specify a minimum of 75 grams — 300 calories — of protein daily to protect your health and keep up your morale. She would probably see that you had an average serving of meat or fish weighing one-third of a pound and containing approximately 25 grams of protein; one egg, 6½ grams; two glasses of skimmed milk, 16 grams of protein; one-third cup of cottage cheese, 16 grams, or one section of Roquefort, 22 grams of protetin.

You also obtain varying but substantial amounts of protein from whole-grain cereals, bread, peas, beans and lentils. But if you prefer, you can have more meat. One-half pound daily is not too much. Add to this an egg and one or two glasses of skimmed milk to ment your protetin, calciom and phosphorhs requirements.

You need the same amounts of fresh fruits and green vegetables when reducing your weight as when holding your weight at normal. But you can cut calories with a vengeance in the form of fats. Fats contain more than twice as many calories as the proteins or carbohydrates.

Penny Puffs Inexpensive but Praiseworthy

OH'S and ah's greet the arrival of a basket of golden-crusted, crisp yeast rolls at luncheon, dinner or late supper. The crisp crust and silken crumb of freshly baked rolls fulfill the promise of their fragrance.

Penny Puffs are praiseworthy because they are inexpensive. They are light and fluffy and in the oven they grow from small bits of dough to plump round puffs that nearly pop out of the muffin pans. The "penny" stands for low cost, and the "puff" for good eating. Here's how you make them:

Penny Puffs

Soften 1 cake yeast in ¼ cup lukewarm water. Scald 1 cup milk and add ¼ cup shortening, ¼ cup sugar and 2 teaspoons salt. When lukewarm add 1 cup sifted soft wheat flour, 1 egg and the softened yeast and beat well. Add 3½ cups flour to make a soft dough. Knead until smooth. Let rise in greased bowl until almost doubled in bulk. Punch down. Pinch off small portions and put into greased muffin pans. Brush tops with melted fat. Let rise until almost doubled in bulk. Bake in hot oven, 450 degrees, for 10 to 15 minutes. Yield about 3½ dozen puffs.

Wool and Rayon

Rayon yarns woven with wool are used for new and interesting rugs shown in the January market. They achieve stunning textural effects, often almost like a lustrous fur. What the use of rayon will mean to the future of the rug industry is the big guess in home furnishing circles just now.

Lent Gives Society A Breathing Spell

But on the Surface the Whirl Goes On; Luncheon Time Discloses as Many Parties As Usual, With Diplomats at Tables

By Hope Ridings Miller.

NOBODY HAD TO LOOK at yesterday's calendar to know Lent had started. For the first morning in months, telephones had a breathing spell; fewer invitations came by mail, and friends I met on my usual rounds were firmly intent on getting away from town as soon as possible—for a much needed rest.

HOPE R. MILLER

Yet on the surface, the whirl is still going merrily along, with enough parties on tap to keep the town entertained. Ladies are still meeting for luncheon—sometimes in large numbers; and visitors are flocking here in droves to be feted right and left.

At luncheon time yesterday when I droped by the Mayflower, I saw as many twosomes, threesomes and larger get-togethers as usual. The Canadian Minister, Loring Christie, was tearing down the lobby on his way to meet an appointment. The Minister of Honduras, Don Julian R. Caceres, was deep in talk with a luncheon guest; and at a table nearby Eugen Teodorescu, of the Rumanian Legation, was with Miss Mary V. Johnson. Mrs. Lawrence Wood Robert, jr., had her usual table; and among others I saw coming down the lobby on the way to the dining room were Mrs. William P. MacCracken and Mrs. Harold Hinton.

LARGEST LUNCHEON party there was the one given by Mrs. Daniel Thew Wright, who was entertaining in honor of Mrs. Jean Bello, mother of the late Jean Harlow, and Mrs. Lou Wertheimer, both of whom are here from California for visits.

Guests gathered in the lounge and stayed on there for luncheon at a long, flower-decked table. In the company were Mrs. George Allen, Mrs. Robert V. Fleming, Mrs. Wright Church, Mrs. John E. Parker, Mrs. John J. Shugrue, Mrs. James Cunningham, Mrs. Abner Drury, Mrs. J. Hugh Davis, Mrs. Robert S. Hinton, Mrs. Fred Newland, Mrs. Clifford McClain, Mrs. William Burns and Miss Meredith Howard, twin sister of Mrs. Wertheimer.

CAPITAL SKETCHBOOK: The Federal Security Administrator and Mrs. Paul V. McNutt will entertain at dinner on February 17 . . . Mme. Cantacuzene had a few friends in for tea yesterday afternoon . . . Mme. Irimescu, wife of the Rumanian Minister, who had cards out for a tea this week, has canceled her party because of illness . . . Friends of Mrs. Emma Guffey Miller say I was misinformed about what went on when she spoke at the luncheon for Democratic National Committee Women at the Democratic Club on Tuesday . . . They insist that she had no intention of ignoring anyone, much less Mrs. Dorothy McAllister, head of the women's division, Democratic National Committee, and that she (Mrs. Miller) said "a great deal of interest" in her speech . . . I wasn't there; I merely reported what I heard about it . . . And now I've given you both sides.

HERE AND THERE: Guests at Miss Caroline Nash's after-the-concert supper for Lily Pons on Tuesday evening, were simply gaga over the guest of honor's stunning frock that she donned especially for the event. Fashioned of clinging green crepe, it had a brief long-sleeved jacket and a high neckline, set off with a handsome gold necklace . . . The party took place at the 1925 F Street Club . . . Mrs. Larz Anderson, of Washington and Brookline, Mass., is in Palm Beach, Fla., where she has taken an apartment for several weeks . . . In Nassau for an indefinite stay is Mrs. Higginson Rogers; and also Mr. and Mrs. Perry B. Van Vleck, who entertained early this week at a luncheon at the British Colonial Hotel.

OFF TO VENEZUELA tomorrow will go Edward Hutchins Robbins, son of Mrs. Warren Delano Robbins, who is connected with the Rockefeller oil interests. His elder brother, Warren, has been in Brazil for a number of years.

Mrs. Robbins is now in New York to bid her son good-by but she will return to Washington in a few days. Accompanying Mr. Robbins to Venezuela will be his wife, the former Louise Auchincloss, and their 3-year-old daughter. They expect an addition to the family within a few weeks.

Mr. and Mrs. Robbins and the former's mother were guests of honor at a small cocktail party given early this week by Henry Lee Munson in his New York apartment at East Seventy-second street. Also in the company were Mrs. Alexander Cochrane Forbes, daughter of Mrs. Warren Delano Robbins; Mrs. Cornelius Vanderbilt, Mrs. Angier Biddle Duke, Mme. Alma Clayburgh, Mrs. Claude Beddington, Charles Baskerville, the artist, and several others.

Mrs. Taft Abandons Reading, Knitting To Help Husband Wage His Campaign

MRS. ROBERT A. TAFT, who used to turn out sweaters and socks by the dozen for her four sons, still hasn't finished a sweater which she started knitting last spring. And why? Because every spare minute these days is taken up with campaigning for her husband, the Senator from Ohio and Republican Presidential candidate.

Mrs. Taft is off today for New York to address various groups and with John Hamilton will broadcast on Monday evening at the Lincoln Day dinner there. Later she will go to Minnesota, her home State until the age of 3, where she will speak before various political groups.

WHEN THE pleasant, dark-haired wife of the Senator told friends the other day that her husband were going to Florida for the week-end, they all chimed "What luck!"

"But if they could have seen our schedule," says Mrs. Taft, "three nights on a train and two days packed solid with meetings and speeches, they might not have been so envious."

Incidentally, the most famous story about Martha Taft tells how on her way to make a speech for her husband, her car turned over in a ditch. But she continued to her engagement anyway. On her recent trip to Florida one of the several thousand men who came down the receiving line said to her "You don't remember me, but I'm the man who pulled you out of your car window in that accident in Ohio."

The postman leaves a big bundle of letters for Mrs. Taft at her white stone house on Massachusetts avenue every day. She answers all mail herself. When her friends urge her to get a secretary, she always says she's afraid she'd run out of things for the secretary to do.

WHEN THEY ARE not dashing over the country making speeches, the Tafts find time to attend many dinners and teas. But Mrs. Taft thinks the importance to officials of social life here is very much over-estimated.

"You can't tell me," says she, "that just because a diplomat's wife fails to call on Mrs. Senator X the Senator will vote against a bill helping the foreigner's country." Mrs. Taft is not a bridge player and prefers parties where conversation is the main feature.

LIFE ON HER FARM near Cincinnati taught Mrs. Taft something about the farm problem. She and the Senator sell raspberries, strawberries and vegetables, but found that what with West Coast competition they couldn't make any money off their apple crop.

Before coming to Washington as a Senator's wife, Mrs. Taft had a finger in many a civic pie in Cincinnati. She was president of the League of Women Voters for several terms and served on the board of various charities. She thinks that Cincinnati is just the right sized town in which to live and make's one's influence felt, as compared with a big place like New York.

THOUGH HER FATHER served as Solicitor General during the Taft Administration, it was from her maternal grandfather that Mrs. Taft acquired her first interest in politics. He was a member of the House of Representatives from Minnesota and was later Chief Justice of the State Supreme Court.

Before campaigning took up most of her time, Mrs. Taft enjoyed reading, but now she no longer has the leisure. She has told all her children to get their reading done before they are 25 for afterwards they may be too busy.

IF SENATOR TAFT hadn't come into her life, affable Mrs. Taft might have ended up as a French teacher. After passing her college board exams for Bryn Mawr, she decided instead to go to Paris, where she studied for two years at the Sorbonne and obtained her certificate as a teacher. At that time she was the only American girl at the French university.

The four Taft boys are 14, 17, 22 and 24. None of them is at home. The two oldest are working and their brothers are at the Taft School in Connecticut, which the Senator attended and of which his uncle is founder and headmaster.

Silver Spring Club Celebrates Anniversary With Home Talent

Mrs. John C. Keele Cuts Birthday Cake With Single Candle

By Jessie Ash Arndt,
The Post Club Editor.

The Woman's Club of Silver Spring yesterday afternoon celebrated its first birthday with a program devoted to home talent. The meeting was held at the Jesup Blair Community House, where the work of the art department decorated the walls and the program included music by the choral and talks by members on club work.

Mrs. John C. Keele, president of the organization which now has over 70 members, presided at the business meeting and program, and cut the birthday cake with its single candle, as a feature of the tea hour. Other officers of the club include Mrs. Hugo Winkler, first vice president; Mrs. John S. Scheidy, second vice president; Mrs. G. Harris White, recording secretary; Mrs. E. R. Gates, corresponding secretary, and Mrs. Charles Krueger, treasurer.

There are six departments, the civic, under the chairmanship of Mrs. William Dahl; home and garden, headed by Mrs. Harry Falk; literature, by Mrs. A. V. Annann; music, Mrs. C. R. Shetterley; welfare, Mrs. Krueger, and hospitality, Mrs. John W. Ayers.

The art department, which has 14 members, meets monthly and, under the direction of its chairman, has done work that compares favorably with that of other groups which employ paid instructors. Mrs. Scheidy was a teacher of vocational art work in the New Jersey schools before coming to Silver Spring and is giving her fellow club members the benefit of her training and experience.

The women have made pastels, plastic, hand-painted mats for luncheon sets; made their own Christmas cards, printing the designs from linoleum cuts; have done basketry under the supervision of Mrs. Keele, who formerly taught it in night schools of the District, and now are prepared to begin bead work under Mrs. Winkler's guidance.

Talks on each type of handicraft were given as the work was displayed yesterday. Mrs. W. F. Leaycraft talked on the pastels; Mrs. E. R. Gates on the mats; Mrs. Louis Schneider, the Christmas cards; Mrs. Keele on the baskets and Mrs. Winkler on the bead work.

The choral group which has about 20 members, sang under Mrs. Shetterley's direction, presenting "Dreaming," by Stephen Foster, and a Negro spiritual.

Hostesses for the tea, following the program, were Mrs. J. F. Winter, Mrs. H. A. Haupa, Mrs. Oercy Thompson and Mrs. R. Dean.

City-Wide Ladies of Charity To Hear Dr. Coulter Monday

Dr A. Barklie Coulter, director of the Bureau for Tuberculosis of the Health Department, has been announced asthe speaker for the meeting of the City-Wide Ladies of Charity Monday morning at the Altamont Apartment, 1901 Wyoming avenue.

Mrs. George O'Connor is president of the organization, composed of women from the various Catholic parishes of the city, who provide milk to the children of needy families. Members may pay $5 yearly dues or pledge themselves to provide a quart of milk a day for the year, which amounts to approximately $43.

The organization, formed in 1933 has functioned under Mrs. O'Connor's leadership for the past five years and is now supplying 75 quarts of milk daily to Washington children. Many of those provided for are children recently released from the Christ Child Convalescent Home, the Children's Country Home, Children's Hospital or reported by Gorgetown or Providence Hospital clinics. Sometimes there are those brought to the attention of the organization by the police or the Visiting Nurse Association.

Part of the money for the milk fund is provided by the annual benefit by the Friendly Sons of St. Patrick, who present their play under the sponsorship of the City-wide Ladies Charity, at the Mayflower Hotel. This season, instead of being given near St. Patrick's Day, it will be on April 1, Mrs. O'Connor has announced.

Resources Call For Special Skill, Women Are Told

Joel D. Wolfsohn, of the General Land Office, Department of the Interior, last night addressed a meeting of the Washington Chapter of ORT, discussing "The Problem of Alaskan Development and the Eventual Possibilities of Colonization." There was a large attendance of members and guests at the meeting, in the Jewish Community Center.

Mr. Wolfsohn confined his discussion to the report of the Department of the Interior, issued last August, on the opportunities offered by Alaska. With possibilities of substantial industrial development, there will also be opportunities for a fine agricultural economy, he said, which would support large numbers of settlers.

He pointed out that the mineral resources, timber for paper manufacturing, fur processing and the use of reindeer hide in the manufacture of gloves and other such articles, would require workers with specialized skills.

The report, he said, suggested as a method of developing the region, the formation of a public corporation with private funds and special powers enabling it to facilitate colonization.

In answer to questions as to colonization, Mr. Wolfsohn said Americans could go freely, but whether people from abroad would be permitted to settle there would depend on legislation by Congress.

Madame Chairman

—By Suzanne

YOUNG WOMEN of today are more serious, earnest and know more definitely what they want to do and where they want to go than those of 1914, Miss Anna V. Day, for 25 years dean of the Women's State Teachers College, Milwaukee, told members of the P. E. O. yesterday. Miss Day, who recently retired and is spending the winter here, addressed the District members of the P. E. O. Sisterhood at their monthly reciprocity luncheon yesterday, at Woodward & Lothrop's Tea Room.

She has no patience, she said, with talk of "flaming youth," but praised the girls of today as "little different from those of 1914 except for their more serious interests."

Chapter F was hostess at the luncheon and Mrs. F. J. Gillies, the president, presided.

Lent Gives Society A Breathing Spell

By Hope Ridings Miller.

NOBODY HAD TO LOOK at yesterday's calendar to know Lent had started. For the first morning in months, telephones had a breathing spell; fewer invitations came by mail, and friends I met on my usual rounds were firmly intent on getting away from town as soon as possible—for a much needed rest.

HOPE R. MILLER

Yet on the surface, the whirl is still going merrily along, with enough parties on tap to keep the town entertained. Ladies are still meeting for luncheon—sometimes in large numbers; and visitors are flocking here in droves to be feted right and left.

At luncheon time yesterday when I droped by the Mayflower, I saw as many twosomes, threesomes and larger get-togethers as usual. The Canadian Minister, Loring Christie, was tearing down the lobby on his way to meet an appointment. The Minister of Honduras, Don Julian R. Caceres, was deep in talk with a luncheon guest; and at a table nearby Eugen Teodorescu, of the Rumanian Legation, was with Miss Mary V. Johnson. Mrs. Lawrence Wood Robert, jr., had her usual table; and among others I saw coming down the lobby on the way to the dining room were Mrs. William P. MacCracken and Mrs. Harold Hinton.

LARGEST LUNCHEON party there was the one given by Mrs. Daniel Thew Wright, who was entertaining in honor of Mrs. Jean Bello, mother of the late Jean Harlow, and Mrs. Lou Wertheimer, both of whom are here from California for visits.

Guests gathered in the lounge and stayed on there for luncheon at a long, flower-decked table. In the company were Mrs. George Allen, Mrs. Robert V. Fleming, Mrs. Wright Church, Mrs. John E. Parker, Mrs. John J. Shugrue, Mrs. James Cunningham, Mrs. Abner Drury, Mrs. J. Hugh Davis, Mrs. Robert S. Hinton, Mrs. Fred Newland, Mrs. Clifford McClain, Mrs. William Burns and Miss Meredith Howard, twin sister of Mrs. Wertheimer.

CAPITAL SKETCHBOOK: The Federal Security Administrator and Mrs. Paul V. McNutt will entertain at dinner on February 17 . . . Mme. Cantacuzene had a few friends in for tea yesterday afternoon . . . Mme. Irimescu, wife of the Rumanian Minister, who had cards out for a tea this week, has canceled her party because of illness . . . Friends of Mrs. Emma Guffey Miller say I was misinformed about what went on when she spoke at the luncheon for Democratic National Committee Women at the Democratic Club on Tuesday . . . They insist that she had no intention of ignoring anyone, much less Mrs. Dorothy McAllister, head of the women's division, Democratic National Committee, and that she (Mrs. Miller) said "a great deal of interest" in her speech . . . I wasn't there; I merely reported what I heard about it . . . And now I've given you both sides.

HERE AND THERE: Guests at Miss Caroline Nash's after-the-concert supper for Lily Pons on Tuesday evening, were simply gaga over the guest of honor's stunning frock that she donned especially for the event. Fashioned of clinging green crepe, it had a brief long-sleeved jacket and a high neckline, set off with a handsome gold necklace . . . The party took place at the 1925 F Street Club . . . Mrs. Larz Anderson, of Washington and Brookline, Mass., is in Palm Beach, Fla., where she has taken an apartment for several weeks . . . In Nassau for an indefinite stay is Mrs. Higginson Rogers; and also Mr. and Mrs. Perry B. Van Vleck, who entertained early this week at a luncheon at the British Colonial Hotel.

OFF TO VENEZUELA tomorrow will go Edward Hutchins Robbins, son of Mrs. Warren Delano Robbins, who is connected with the Rockefeller oil interests. His elder brother, Warren, has been in Brazil for a number of years.

Mrs. Robbins is now in New York to bid her son good-by but she will return to Washington in a few days. Accompanying Mr. Robbins to Venezuela will be his wife, the former Louise Auchincloss, and their 3-year-old daughter. They expect an addition to the family within a few weeks.

Mr. and Mrs. Robbins and the former's mother were guests of honor at a small cocktail party given early this week by Henry Lee Munson in his New York apartment at East Seventy-second street. Also in the company were Mrs. Alexander Cochrane Forbes, daughter of Mrs. Warren Delano Robbins; Mrs. Cornelius Vanderbilt, Mrs. Angier Biddle Duke, Mme. Alma Clayburgh, Mrs. Claude Beddington, Charles Baskerville, the artist, and several others.

Mrs. Taft Abandons Reading, Knitting To Help Husband Wage His Campaign

MRS. ROBERT A. TAFT, who used to turn out sweaters and socks by the dozen for her four sons, still hasn't finished a sweater which she started knitting last spring. And why? Because every spare minute these days is taken up with campaigning for her husband, the Senator from Ohio and Republican Presidential candidate.

Mrs. Taft is off today for New York to address various groups and with John Hamilton will broadcast on Monday evening at the Lincoln Day dinner there. Later she will go to Minnesota, her home State until the age of 3, where she will speak before various political groups.

WHEN THE pleasant, dark-haired wife of the Senator told friends the other day that her husband were going to Florida for the week-end, they all chimed "What luck!"

"But if they could have seen our schedule," says Mrs. Taft, "three nights on a train and two days packed solid with meetings and speeches, they might not have been so envious."

Incidentally, the most famous story about Martha Taft tells how on her way to make a speech for her husband, her car turned over in a ditch. But she continued to her engagement anyway. On her recent trip to Florida one of the several thousand men who came down the receiving line said to her "You don't remember me, but I'm the man who pulled you out of your car window in that accident in Ohio."

The postman leaves a big bundle of letters for Mrs. Taft at her white stone house on Massachusetts avenue every day. She answers all mail herself. When her friends urge her to get a secretary, she always says she's afraid she'd run out of things for the secretary to do.

WHEN THEY ARE not dashing over the country making speeches, the Tafts find time to attend many dinners and teas. But Mrs. Taft thinks the importance to officials of social life here is very much over-estimated.

"You can't tell me," says she, "that just because a diplomat's wife fails to call on Mrs. Senator X the Senator will vote against a bill helping the foreigner's country." Mrs. Taft is not a bridge player and prefers parties where conversation is the main feature.

LIFE ON HER FARM near Cincinati taught Mrs. Taft something about the farm problem. She and the Senator sell raspberries, strawberries and vegetables, but found that what with West Coast competition they couldn't make any money off their apple crop.

Before coming to Washington as a Senator's wife, Mrs. Taft had a finger in many a civic pie in Cincinnati. She was president of the League of Women Voters for several terms and served on the board of various charities. She thinks that Cincinnati is just the right sized town in which to live and make's one's influence felt, as compared with a big place like New York.

THOUGH HER FATHER served as Solicitor General during the Taft Administration, it was from her maternal grandfather that Mrs. Taft acquired her first interest in politics. He was a member of the House of Representatives from Minnesota and was later Chief Justice of the State Supreme Court.

Before campaigning took up most of her time, Mrs. Taft enjoyed reading, but now she no longer has the leisure. She has told all her children to get their reading done before they are 25 for afterwards they may be too busy.

IF SENATOR TAFT hadn't come into her life, affable Mrs. Taft might have ended up as a French teacher. After passing her college board exams for Bryn Mawr, she decided instead to go to Paris, where she studied for two years at the Sorbonne and obtained her certificate as a teacher. At that time she was the only American girl at the French university.

The four Taft boys are 14, 17, 22 and 24. None of them is at home. The two oldest are working and their brothers are at the Taft School in Connecticut, which the Senator attended and of which his uncle is founder and headmaster.

Silver Spring Club Celebrates Anniversary With Home Talent

Mrs. John C. Keele Cuts Birthday Cake With Single Candle

By Jessie Ash Arndt,
The Post Club Editor.

The Woman's Club of Silver Spring yesterday afternoon celebrated its first birthday with a program devoted to home talent. The meeting was held at the Jesup Blair Community House, where the work of the art department decorated the walls and the program included music by the choral and talks by members on club work.

Mrs. John C. Keele, president of the organization which now has over 70 members, presided at the business meeting and program, and cut the birthday cake with its single candle, as a feature of the tea hour. Other officers of the club include Mrs. Hugo Winkler, first vice president; Mrs. John S. Scheidy, second vice president; Mrs. G. Harris White, recording secretary; Mrs. E. R. Gates, corresponding secretary, and Mrs. Charles Krueger, treasurer.

There are six departments, the civic, under the chairmanship of Mrs. William Dahl; home and garden, headed by Mrs. Harry Falk; literature, by Mrs. A. V. Annann; music, Mrs. C. R. Shetterley; welfare, Mrs. Krueger, and hospitality, Mrs. John W. Ayers.

The art department, which has 14 members, meets monthly and, under the direction of its chairman, has done work that compares favorably with that of other groups which employ paid instructors. Mrs. Scheidy was a teacher of vocational art work in the New Jersey schools before coming to Silver Spring and is giving her fellow club members the benefit of her training and experience.

The women have made pastels, plastic, hand-painted mats for luncheon sets; made their own Christmas cards, printing the designs from linoleum cuts; have done basketry under the supervision of Mrs. Keele, who formerly taught it in night schools of the District, and now are prepared to begin bead work under Mrs. Winkler's guidance.

Talks on each type of handicraft were given as the work was displayed yesterday. Mrs. W. F. Leaycraft talked on the pastels; Mrs. E. R. Gates on the mats; Mrs. Louis Schneider, the Christmas cards; Mrs. Keele on the baskets and Mrs. Winkler on the bead work.

The choral group which has about 20 members, sang under Mrs. Shetterley's direction, presenting "Dreaming," by Stephen Foster, and a Negro spiritual.

Hostesses for the tea, following the program, were Mrs. J. F. Winter, Mrs. H. A. Haupa, Mrs. Oercy Thompson and Mrs. R. Dean.

City-Wide Ladies of Charity To Hear Dr. Coulter Monday

Dr A. Barklie Coulter, director of the Bureau for Tuberculosis of the Health Department, has been announced asthe speaker for the meeting of the City-Wide Ladies of Charity Monday morning at the Altamont Apartment, 1901 Wyoming avenue.

Mrs. George O'Connor is president of the organization, composed of women from the various Catholic parishes of the city, who provide milk to the children of needy families. Members may pay $5 yearly dues or pledge themselves to provide a quart of milk a day for the year, which amounts to approximately $43.

The organization, formed in 1933 has functioned under Mrs. O'Connor's leadership for the past five years and is now supplying 75 quarts of milk daily to Washington children. Many of those provided for are children recently released from the Christ Child Convalescent Home, the Children's Country Home, Children's Hospital or reported by Gorgetown or Providence Hospital clinics. Sometimes there are those brought to the attention of the organization by the police or the Visiting Nurse Association.

Part of the money for the milk fund is provided by the annual benefit by the Friendly Sons of St. Patrick, who present their play under the sponsorship of the City-wide Ladies Charity, at the Mayflower Hotel. This season, instead of being given near St. Patrick's Day, it will be on April 1, Mrs. O'Connor has announced.

J. D. Wolfsohn Talks to ORT About Alaska

Resources Call For Special Skill, Women Are Told

Joel D. Wolfsohn, of the General Land Office, Department of the Interior, last night addressed a meeting of the Washington Chapter of ORT, discussing "The Problem of Alaskan Development and the Eventual Possibilities of Colonization." There was a large attendance of members and guests at the meeting, in the Jewish Community Center.

Mr. Wolfsohn confined his discussion to the report of the Department of the Interior, issued last August, on the opportunities offered by Alaska. With possibilities of substantial industrial development, there will also be opportunities for a fine agricultural economy, he said, which would support large numbers of settlers.

He pointed out that the mineral resources, timber for paper manufacturing, fur processing and the use of reindeer hide in the manufacture of gloves and other such articles, would require workers with specialized skills.

The report, he said, suggested as a method of developing the region, the formation of a public corporation with private funds and special powers enabling it to facilitate colonization.

In answer to questions as to colonization, Mr. Wolfsohn said Americans could go freely, but whether people from abroad would be permitted to settle there would depend on legislation by Congress.

A.Y.C. Suggests Hamilton Work On U. S. Ills

Letter From Cadden Urges Him to Attack Nation's 'Real Enemies'

The American Youth Congress yesterday advised John Hamilton, chairman of the Republican National committee, to concentrate on "the real enemies of American democracy and American youth," instead of "shooting at Communists." It also invited Luise Rainer, screen star, to appear as Joan of Arc Saturday in the organization's parade here.

The challenge was directed at Hamilton in a letter from Joseph Cadden, Washington, executive secretary of the American Youth Congress, after the G. O. P. chairman refused to send a representative to the American Youth Congress Citizenship Institute, opening Friday.

Miss Rainier said yesterday she had received the invitation to lead the parade, but had decided not to accept it. The parade will end at the White House, where President Roosevelt will address delegates to the four-day institute.

Fundamental proolems before American youth, according to Cadden, are unemployment, lack of adequate educational, housing and health facilities, and the threat of war.

$80,000 Is Asked In Slander Suits Over Warring Case

William M. Gates, 327 Sixteenth street northeast, and John B. Crawford, 326 D street northeast, former deputy United States marshals, sued the United States Marshal and two newspapers in the District Court yesterday for damages totaling $80,000 for statements relating to them which were made at the time of the Warring trial jury tampering scandal a year ago.

The men asked a total of $40,000 from United States Marshal John B. Colpoys, whom they accused of slander in statements he made about their leaving his staff. They said they were injured also by remarks made by Colpoys last December.

Gates and Crawford asked $20,000 damages from The Washington Post for publishing Colpoys' statements and other material relating to the Warring trial. Also sued for $20,000 for similar publications was the Washington Daily News.

Tobey Assails Census Queries As 'Political'

Income Questions Should Be Removed, Republican Says

Parts of the 1940 census questionnaire were assailed as illegal and based on "political motives" yesterday by Senator Tobey (Republican), of New Hampshire, who demanded the removal of questions on personal income.

Charging "private information" given the Government had been illegally used in the last Presidential campaign, Tobey told the Senate:

"There is real danger to our individual citizens in forcing them to divulge to the politically appointed census enumerators information concerning the individual citizen's income."

He introduced a bill to compel the Census Bureau of the Department of Commerce to eliminate these items:

"Amount of money, wages or salary received (including commissions) (1939).

"Did this person receive income of $50 or more from sources other than money, wages or salary?"

Tobey read a letter from Secretary of Commerce Hopkins replying to previous criticism of the census questionnaire, in which Hopkins denied there was any "political motive" back of the questions, and denounced Tobey's criticism as "partisan, political sniping."

Tobey repeated his charges of "political motives" in the census questions, and demanded that census enumerators be selected "on the basis of merit rather than politics."

Realty Units Fight Parking Space Rule

Owners, Architects And Others Oppose Proposed Garage Requirement Here

Spokesmen for building owners, architects and real estate groups, yesterday opposed a plan to require garage space in future apartment houses and assembly places.

Suggested to the District Zoning Commission by Harland Bartholomew, consultant for the National Capital Park and Planning Commission, the proposal was criticized at a public hearing yesterday. The commission will meet today at 10 a. m. in executive session.

Rufus S. Lusk, executive secretary of the Building Owners and Managers Association, said the proposal was "illogical" and was the wrong approach to "getting automobiles off the streets." Lusk said this was not a zoning problem but a police problem.

"Headache to Enforce"

He said his group "is in sympathy" with the District government, but "this important endeavor has been delayed so long that regulations that will bring this about will prove to be a headache for the officials who enforce them."

Lusk said the commission could "drive the automobiles off the street" by having a parking bill for $10 sent to the motorist at the end of the year. The following year, the District would send a bill for $20, he suggested.

The proposal is to require garage space in multiple-family dwellings and in buildings designed for public assembly, which would include churches, arenas, auditoriums and the like. In multiple-family dwellings, space would have to be made to accommodate one automobile for each dwelling unit.

Hart Cites Difficulties

Ringgold Hart, representing the Washington Real Estate Board, told the commission the proposed amendment would make present apartment houses non-conforming. Hart said his group had surveyed some apartment houses and that in most cases it was disclosed not all families had a car.

Gilbert L. Hall, professor of law at the George Washington University, stated plans for a future auditorium and gymnasium would be "imperiled" because of the ground necessary to build a parking lot. He said the auditorium will be started in a few months and would seat about 2,000 persons. This would mean a parking lot to accommodate 400 cars, under the proposal there be parking space for one car to five people.

Carroll Meigs, chairman of the municipal legislation committee of the local chapter of the American Institute of Architects, protested the proposal as did M. M. McLean, representing the Brookland Methodist Church, and Thomas Raysor, of the Washington Federation of Churches.

Representatives of several civic groups appeared in favor of the proposal. They were Dr. George C. Havener and H. L. Coleman, of the Northwest Council of Citizens' Associations, and members of the Cathedral Heights and Cleveland Park groups.

Brookland Citizens Approve Proposed Liquor Investigation

Organization Opposes Plan to Force Apartment Houses to Provide Parking Facilities; Stull and Cahill Ask Unity

Proposed investigation by the Commissioners of the sale of liquor here won the overwhelming approval of the Brookland Citizens Association last night.

The organization also went on record opposing a proposed zoning regulation to compel apartment houses and "public assembly places" to provide parking space for tenants or persons attending functions. Harry N. Stull, president of the Federation of Citizens Associations, and John P. Cahill, president of the Dahlgren Terrace Citizens Association, pleaded for unity in attaining needed civic improvements.

Daniel Masterson told the meeting in the Brookland Masonic Hall, Twelfth and Monroe streets northeast, that "an effort should be made to stop the spreading of liquor selling in residential areas."

"Anyone who travels through the streets must be distressed by the blatant and blaring signs advertising liquor," he said.

Dr. George R. Ellis said "something should be done to oppose large liquor establishments which aid boys of 16 and 17 years of age to get in trouble."

Opposition to the investigation was expressed by Jacob Permut.

"Issuance of licenses to establishments near schools can do no harm to children since dealers are not permitted to sell to minors," he asserted.

"Dealers have invested considerable funds in their establishments and incompetence has not been demonstrated by the Alcohol Beverage Control Board, he added.

President Marvin M. McLean, who led opposition to the zoning regulation, pointed out the restriction would work hardship on schools, theaters and churches.

The regulation, he stated, would be particularly burdensome to assembly places in built-up areas where land could be obtained for parking areas only at extremely high cost.

Stull declared he had always "been amazed that so many people will let a few civic-minded individuals direct the activity of the citizens associations, but take all the advantages gained, without contributing anything to the fight."

"I can't understand how a property owner can invest so much money in his home and let others do the work of preserving or improving the neighborhood," he remarked.

The federation and the citizens associations, he said he told Congressional committees, "may not represent Washingtonians, but they come closer to it than any other organizations here."

Cahill sought the support of the Brookland association in the naming of instructed delegates when elections for the Northeast Citizens Conference comes up next year.

The association also passed a resolution supporting constructing of a new central public library and asking establishment of a branch library in the Brookland area.

Friendship Citizens

Plans for construction of a wholesale merchandise store in Friendship section were criticized last night at a meeting of the citizen's association.

Members urged the mart be moved south and west from the proposed site at Albemarle street, Wisconsin avenue, and Murdock Mill and River roads because of the proximity of the Eldbrooke Methodist Church to this location.

The unit also asked the elimination of either the entrance or the exit to the store, now planned on Albermarle street and facing the Janney School. If both terminals are constructed traffic dangerous to school children will result, it was said.

The association asked the appointment of an assistant principal at Woodrow Wilson High School as provided for when the enrollment exceeds 1,500. More than 1,700 pupils attend the school at present, it was said.

Members scored the failure of District Refuse Department to adequately clear streets after the recent snowfalls. The proposed ouster of Dr. Ruhland also was criticized.

Girl, Talking To Schoolmate, Falls off Porch

Leaning over the railing of her back porch while talking to a schoolmate last night Shirley Belkov, 16, 1110 Jefferson street northwest, slipped and fell to the concrete paving 20 feet below.

Norman Schwartz, also 16, of 5400 Illinois avenue, her schoolmate at Roosevelt High, with whom she was conversing, tried to break her fall. Failing, he ran to the office of Dr. Ruth Jackson, at 5404 Illinois avenue. She responded and ordered the girl to Emergency Hospital. There Miss Belkov was treated for injuries to the head, cheek, nose, upper lip and left arm after remaining unconscious for more than half an hour.

Capital News In Brief

War and the Roses

If they are not fighting on the Western Front or other fronts, rose growers from all parts of Europe will attend an international convention here in 1941.

Rosarians from England, France, Germany, Spain, Ireland and other European nations will assemble here as guests of the Potomac Rose Society at its fall meeting in 1941—"if the international situation permits"—it was announced at a meeting of the unit at the National Museum.

Dr. L. M. Massey, president of the American Rose Society, declared a new spray, "egetol," an antidote to the deadly "black spot" rose disease, has been developed.

Dean Kayser Speaks

"Democracies make for better wars" and must be "disciplined" for lasting pace, Dean Elmer L. Kayser, of George Washington University, declared last night at the Jewish Community Center.

Democracy, developing with the Industrial Revolution, inevitably brought struggle for world markets, imperialism, and war, Kayser stated.

The best means of settling the three current wars and achieving a stable peace would be through confederation, Kayser asserted. "But not a confederation of war alliances," such as marked the Treaty of Versailles, he added.

Urging free trade and a surrendering of imperialistic aims, Kayser declared democracies must be "disciplined" so that international policy and home administration would be handled by experts, specialists in diplomacy and government.

Milk Center Use of Schools Is Approved

Board Expresses Its Opposition To Tydings Bill To Widen Teaching

The Board of Education yesterday took action to extend the utilization of school buildings in one instance and to limit it in another.

Board members voted to allow use of space in school buildings as distributing centers for milk for needy persons, under the agreement between milk distributors and the Department of Agriculture.

The board voted to advise the corporation counsel that in its opinion the Tydings Bill, which would provide for admission of more non-resident children to District schools with free tuition, is both "unnecessary and undesirable."

Dr. Frank W. Ballou, superintendent of schools, warned that the appropriation for fuel, gas and electricity might prove inadequate, because of the severity of the winter and because school officials have no knowledge of or control over the extent of community use of buildings, after school hours. That matter is now under the coordinator of recreation, Lewis Barrett. At a meeting he said he would furnish a report and stated his impression that the use of buildings would run about the same as last year.

Back Folk Festival

The board voted cooperation in the seventh annual National Folk Festival, to be sponsored by The Washington Post, April 25-27, by allowing school children to attend matinees.

The board expressed its disapprobal of the Tydings Bill after Charles D. Drayton, chairman of its legislative committee, read a statement, which said:

"It is the overwhelming sentiment of the District, as frequently expressed in resolutions and official action of various citizens' associations, that the District is already educating too large a number of nonresident children at a cost of between $200,000 and $300,000 a year."

The board authorized Dr. Ballou and his associates to negotiate with the director of Public Welfare to make available school facilities for the milk distributing centers which would not interfere with the school work in those buildings.

Letter From Bondy

A letter from Robert E. Bondy, welfare director, stated that the locations which needed to be covered were at Forty-fifth street and Sheriff road northeast, 200 square feet; Fourth and W streets northwest, 250 square feet; Fourteenth and H streets northwest, 250 square feet; Twenty-fifth and K streets northwest, 200 square feet.

He pointed out that space in municipal buildings, particularly schools, was sought in order that the distribution may be accomplished at a minimum cost to the District.

Drayton, who is head of the board at Children's Hospital, announced that an attempt to reduce its deficit would be made through benefit performances of an indoor circus at Riverdale Stadium April 15-21. Drayton, who pointed out that the hospital is operating at a deficit averaging $25,000 a year, asked to what extent the board could permit the circus to be publicized in the schools. He will confer with Dr. Ballou, and a later report will be made to the board.

Dr. Ballou announced at the meeting that this year no football games for the high schools will be scheduled on Thanksgiving Day, so there will be no conflict with church services.

After receiving information that the $190,000 approved by the Budget Bureau for the eight-room addition of Syphax School would fall short of the $212,350 needed, the board voted to send the revised estimate to the District Commissioners for forwarding to the Budget Bureau and Congress. Gratz E. Dunkum, chairman of the board's finance committee, presented the revised estimate, made by M. A. Coe, chief of the architectural division, in a letter from the Municipal Architect.

The board adopted resolutions on the death of Isaac Gans, former member of the board, and then adjourned in respect to his memory.

D. C. Motorist Fined

Mervyn Ott, 32, of Washington, was fined $300 and given a suspended jail sentence of one year in the corporation court at Alexandria yesterday, after entering a plea of guilty to a charge of hit-and-run in connection with the death of Elmer F. Thompson, of Alexandria.

Boy, 5, Hops Ride, Nearly Loses Ear

Five-year-old Howard C. Foster, of 77 H street northwest, went for a ride on the rear of a coal truck yesterday afternoon, and stuck his head out too far as the truck turned into an alley at 66 Defrees street northwest.

Rossiter Tells ABC Board Of Alterations

$30,000 Pledged For Cafe Improvement, Applicant Says

Leo J. Rossiter yesterday informed the Alcoholic Beverage Control Board he had pledged more than $30,000 to improve his restaurant at 4132 Georgia avenue, for which he is seeking a renewal of class "C" liquor license.

Not long after making this statement, Rossiter shouted a loud "no" in reply to Ernest Henry, of the Petworth Citizens Association, who asked if the restaurant owner had first "advised with the civic groups before planning these alterations."

Although the board had expected to terminate the hearings yesterday, it postponed proceedings until 9 a. m. today in order to attend the funeral of Isaac Gans, a charter member of the board.

Featured by clashes between Henry and Rossiter, and Henry and Albert Levin, attorney for the applicant, the hearing centered almost entirely on a set of blue prints of the improvements and a contract for new store fixtures.

After Rossiter said he had contracted for the improvements and that they were actually under way, he was asked by Henry if a building permit had been obtained.

"That's a very foolish question, Mr. Henry," Rossiter said, adding "the contractor had to have one before he could begin any work."

Julius Lazerow, local representative of the National Store Fixtures, Inc., a Baltimore firm, stated he had contracted with Rossiter to supply $17,500 in new equipment for the entire restaurant. He did not have the contract, but said he would have Levin bring it in this morning.

This morning the opposing attorneys will offer verbal arguments before the board, which is expected to arrive at a decision before the end of the week.

Low Mark

Pending Criminal Cases Hit Bottom

Criminal cases awaiting trial in the District Court reached an all-time low of 98 yesterday, including 30 indictments returned Tuesday.

The low record followed a three-year campaign by District Attorney David A. Pine to make the criminal docket current. Two years ago there were 436 cases pending. Last year there were 198.

The figures do not include several dozen cases in which the defendants cannot be tried because they are insane or have not been taken into custody.

Dr. James Nolan To Address Meeting

Dr. James A. Nolan, executive director of the Washington Criminal Justice Association, will address a mass meeting sponsored by the District Suffrage Association at 8 o'clock tonight at the United States Chamber of Commerce Building. "We have set out to tear the mask off the shame of the Nation's Capital," William H. Mondell, chairman of the speakers bureau of the association, said in announcing the meeting.

"We invite the public," he added, "to take a walk away from the gleaming marble edifices into the miserable back alley of which poets never sing. National disgrace is too mild a term for this monstrous display of official ineptitude."

Other speakers will include Mrs. Helen Duey Hoffman, executive director of the Washington Housing Association; Dr. Edmund M. Ellerson, of the District Medical Society; and Harry N. Stull, president of the Federation of Citizens Associations.

Frustration Brings Dictatorship, He Tells Wisconsin Alumni

A widespread feeling of near dispair as to the effectiveness of democratic government has gripped Europe, Joseph E. Davies, special assistant to the Secretary of State, said here last night.

In a talk at the Founders' Day dinner of the University of Wisconsin Alumni Association, held in the Dodge Hotel, the man who formerly served as American Ambassador to Russia and Belgium, said:

"The three years I spent in Europe gave me a profound conviction that it is not only the blazing of guns that threatens our security and our civilization. I was shocked to discover that, even in liberal countries, there was a widespread feeling of frustration as to the effectiveness and permanency of the democratic parliamentary system of government. That feeling in many cases verges on despair and utter hopelessness.

"Within our time, we know, governments have been created on the theory that democracy is a failure; that it is inefficient; that a parliamentary government wastes its energies in debate; that it is incapable of the speed action which modern times require; that it is a relic of a false political idealistic illusion; that it belongs to the past, and that the 'future belongs' to those who submit their lives and their destinies to the supreme control of an absolute autarchy."

Mr. Davies said that "the alarming fact about it all" is that one-fifth of the world's surface and one-fifth of the peoples of the world have adopted the totalitarian form of government. To millions of youth, he said, this doctrine has become a religion for which they desire to live "daringly," or even die "courageously."

"It is the same old tyranny," Mr. Davies continued, "only in a new form and implemented by the zealot energy and powerful vigor of desperate and strong peoples.

"We have no mission, of course, to save the world from these heresies. These peoples have the right to have any form of government they desire.

"But we have priceless values which we must protect at home.

"There is an epidemic of false thinking raging over the world. More, it has been implemented by governments and terrific armaments. We can protect ourselves from military danger. But from this insidious disease we must also be safe. We must keep this poison, which has infected so large a part of the earth, out of the well of our American life."

Mr. Davies, who won his A. B. from the University of Wisconsin in 1898 and his LL. B. in 1901, said that college men and women are peculiarly "the sentinels on the outer walls." Never, he said, was there more need for them to militantly combat the heresies and falacies abroad in the world.

"No materialistic largesse of dictatorship could ever compensate for the loss of political and religious freedom."

Mrs. Davies, the former Marjorie Post Hutton, accompanied the diplomat to the alumni dinner. George E. Worthington, president of the alumni association, presided.

Among others present were the Rev. Dr. Albert J. McCartney, pastor of the Covenant-First Presbyterian Church, and Mrs. McCartney; Senator Alexander Wiley, of Wisconsin, and Mrs. Wiley; Representative Merlin Hull; Representative Reid F. Murray and Mrs. Murray; William M. Leiserson, of the National Labor Relations Board, and Mrs. Leiserson, and B. H. Meyer, former member of the Interstate Commerce Commission, and Mrs. Meyer. Senator Wiley echoed Mr. Davies' sentiment about "talking America up—not down." He said he did not think this generation would give the next one a discounted heritage.

70 Children Ask for New, Warm School

Grade Pupils Appeal To Mrs. Roosevelt In North Randle

"Seventy little school children" have voiced an appeal to Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt to help them get a new "warm, comfortable" school to replace the outmoded portable structure in the North Randle Highlands section.

An open letter signed with the pseudonym representing the grade school students who attend the school appears in the issue of The District Leader, a bimonthly newspaper reflecting Southeast problems.

The letter told the First Lady:

"If you come to see us, you won't be able to come in the front door, because they are stuffed with newspapers to keep out the cold—so just go around to the side steps."

"The hall you will enter in back of the rooms is very cold, but once you get inside the main rooms it isn't so bad, if you just stay a little while.

"If you come you can see how the wooden walls and wooden floors are rather hard to keep warm and how our thermometer sometimes gets up to 72 degrees—that is, after the fire has been burning a good while.

"On Monday mornings, especially, it stays around 60 degrees a long time because the buildings are not heated since the previous Friday. At 4 a. m. this last Monday, the thermometer read 10 degrees!

"If you come to see us you will see how our caretaker has to heat water on a little stove to put down the drains on account of the lavatories being stopped up with ice—yes, they are frozen. And it's very cold for us little girls and boys to go in these lavatories. We'd just rather wait until we get home.

"If you come now we will let you see our own 'skating rink.' It is right in front of our building. This is water that settles in a hole right there because there is no sewer and now it is frozen."

Harry W. Glemser, president of the North Randle Highlands Community Citizens Association, last night declared the complaint was justified in principle although "slightly exaggerated."

For two years the citizens unit has urged replacement of the school, he said. Particular deficiencies of the building, Glemser declared, are the outmoded coal furnace which keeps the room at an uneven temperature, the necessity for painting, and window screens.

Murray Asks Doctors Help Health Plan

Montanan Urges Profession Assist In U. S. Program To Improve Status

Senator Murray (Democrat), of Montana, chairman of the subcommittee considering the national health bill, last night urged the medical profession to cooperate with Congress in planning a constructive, long-range health program.

The measure introduced at the last session by Senator Wagner (Democrat), of New York, requires revision, Murray said, but he reported general agreement throughout the country on the ultimate objectives.

The Wagner bill provides for Federal aid to State programs for child and maternal health, hospital construction, disability insurance, general public health services and general medical care. Annual expenditures would increase from $80,000,000 next year to $250,000,000 by 1943.

Uses Present Framework

No departure from principles already enacted into law is involved in the bill, Murray said, since it builds "upon the framework of health services constructed under the Social Security Act."

Murray spoke before 200 members of the District Medical Society. In a business session before his speech the society last night approved a report condemning the substitute section of the reorganization bill relating to the District Health Department, recently proposed by the District Commissioners.

"The only difference between the substitute section and the original is that one is mandatory and the other is not," the report declares, pointing out that both permit the President to designate an officer from the Public Health Service or Army or Navy Medical Corps as District Health Officer.

Murray Reviews Hearing

"There is no need for such a provision in the law," the report states, "unless it is contemplated to federalize the department."

Murray recalled that facts brought out before the subcommittee conducting hearings on the Wagner bill indicate many Americans are self-supporting in the necessities of life except medical care.

Georgetown Basketers Defeat Temple, 34-31

The Washington Post Sports

18 WASHINGTON: THURSDAY, FEBRUARY 8, 1940 X*

Rizzi, Pajak Lead Hoyas To Victory

Hilltoppers Barely Last to Win After Holding Commanding Early Lead at Tech

Georgetown U.'s basketball ups-and-downs this season struck an "up" note last night at Tech gym as the Hoyas, possessors of a 13-point lead at one time, scrambled for a 34-31 decision over Temple with 2,000 fans looking on.

Beaten by the Owls, 38-29, in a previous game in Philadelphia, Georgetown combined a sizzling scoring streak by Irving Rizzi and a desperate stall to take its revenge, issuing Temple its seventh defeat in 13 games.

What chances to tally that Rizzi, one of two juniors on the youthful G. U. club, passed up were well taken care of by George Pajak, the other junior. Rizzi tallied 17 points and Pajak 11. Three sophomores completed the team which played all but a few seconds of the game for the Hoyas—Buddy O'Grady, Jim Giebel and Al Lujack.

Two Plays Ruin Lead

Midway in the first period the Hoyas had contrived for a 15-10 lead, but that vanished on two plays by the smooth-passing Owls. Bill Bechtloff registered two straight foul shots and Howie Kahn sank a field goal and followed that with a charity toss off O'Grady.

Then with a scant seven seconds of the period left, Rizzi blasted at the basket from midcourt and gave his team a 17-15 margin at the half. Three straight points by tiny Angie Musi with the start of the second session put the Hoyas on the short end for the first time in the game, but four straight for Rizzi in retaliation again put the hosts on top.

Rizzi, a cool player if there ever was one, at that point decided Georgetown needed a few points. While his mates held the invaders scoreless, the kinky-pated junior rang up ten points in quick succession. Pajak added two more and the score was 34-31.

Hoyas Freeze Ball

The Hoyas evidently thought that was enough. They froze the ball, but with indifferent success. Temple's Bob Nicol was the first substitute for either team with three minutes left, and before he was in action more than a minute he had scored four points. Mendy Snyder and Halpen each got an-

G.W. Courtmen Meet Toledo Five Tonight

George Washington University's basketball squad faces its most difficult assignment of the season within the next three days. The Colonials entrained yesterday for Toledo, where they meet the University of Toledo tonight in the first of two Ohio games.

The second game is to be played with Western Reserve University at Cleveland Saturday night.

This is the Colonials' third trip to Toledo in three years and they have yet to beat the Rockets who are hard to unseat on their home floor. Chuck Chuckovits, one of the great shooters of the past decade in intercollegiate circles, scored heavily against George Washington in their last two meetings.

Last year in Washington, however, the Colonials managed to save face by walloping Chuckovits & Co. by a 1-point margin. This year Chuckovits is gone, but Toledo rolls merrily on and at this point has a record of 17 victories in 20 games.

G. W. can even its series with Toledo by winning tonight's engagement, although the Rockets are favored.

Washington College Beats C. U., 39 to 35

Cards Rally to Tie At 35-All; Shoremen Dominate Final Minute

Catholic University dropped its ninth straight game of the current season last night at Brookland as a clever Washington College five sank two field goals within the last 30 seconds to win, 39-35.

Coming back in the last quarter to stage a rally which had 500 spectators on their feet with visions of a Cardinal victory, Catholic tied the score at 35-35 only to see Mike Kardash, midget Washington forward, drop in a long set shot. Collins then added insult to injury by hanging up a snowbird to clinch matters.

Up to this time, however, Catholic had been doing all right, matching the invaders point for point throughout the first half, twice leading by three-point margins. Its passing and general floor work showing marked improvement, the Cards battled the Shoremen right up to the final whistle as if they were playing for the national championship.

It was Gene Daly, the only man in a Catholic University uniform not a member of the football team, who was the Redbirds' standard bearer. Scoring 8 points, but making a more available contribution in his fine defensive work, Daly was the backbone of the attack of C. U.

Not to be overlooked is Joe Carrig, a football end, who scored 6 points and did yeoman work in retrieving erratic shots off both backboards.

Washington College exhibited a team which belied its mediocre season record of eight wins against the same number of losses. Displaying excellent team work in addition to some fine sharpshooting, the Shoremen led during most of the game, compiling a 21-to-18 lead at the end of the first half.

Washington, 1938-39 Maryland State champions, drew first blood after five minutes had elapsed in the first quarter when McN'T counted a field goal and Harold Neubert followed this with another goal from the field, before Carmen Pirro could score a free throw for the hosts.

The lead see-sawed back and forth throughout the first half with neither team able to make much headway in locating the enemy basket, although enough shots were tried to shame the highest scoring outfit in the country.

That Catholic's foul-shooting performances demonstrated marked improvement may be ascertained from the fact that the Cards converted nine out of eleven charity tosses.

Neubert's 13 points represented the top individual honor, while Kardesh, Daly and Johnny White tied for second place with eight points apiece.

In a preliminary game, the Catholic U. frosh won their second game this season by defeating the Government Printing Office five, 37-18.

Newark, N. J., Feb. 7 (AP).—Donald G. (Hooker) Herring, jr., used an artificial limb for the first time today and expressed satisfaction as he departed to classes at Princeton University, where he hopes to be a member of the track team in the spring.

Duvall Stars, Makes 20 of Terp Points

By the Associated Press

Lexington, Va., Feb. 7.—The University of Maryland's basketball team defeated the V. M. I. Cadets, 60 to 33, here tonight in a free-shooting exhibition led by Merle Duvall, Terp forward, who hit the hoops for 20 points.

The Cadets made a close battle of the game for the first ten minutes, twice taking the lead and outspeeding the visitors in scrambles for the ball, before the Maryland steamroller got underway. The Terrapins began to cash in on

Fred Marberry Out of Baseball For Good, He Says

Corsicana, Tex., Feb. 7 (AP).—Fred Marberry, who has been knocking around baseball for many years, said today he was retiring from the game.

Big Firpo, who has played in the major circuit, the Texas League and once umpired in the American League, will enter the gasoline business here.

He pitched for Fort Worth and Dallas in recent years and has played with Little Rock, Jackson, Washington, Detroit, the New York Giants and Toledo.

Marberry pitched for the Nats for many years and his great relief work in 1924-25 helped the Washington team win two pennants.

W. and J. Five Beats Navy By 37-28

By the Associated Press

Annapolis, Feb. 7.—Navy's basketball team blew a 17-14 halftime lead and dropped a 37-38 decision to the tall court aces from Washington and Jefferson College today.

It was Navy's seventh loss in eight starts, and the visitors' eighth win in nine tries.

The Midshipmen started strong, holding a 15-10 advantage for their longest lead.

Early in the second half Geisler brought W. & J. up even at 20-20, and a minute later sent them winging with a midcourt heave that made it 22-20.

Navy managed to stay within three points until two minutes before game's end, when the score was 31-28. The visitors dropped in a pair of quickies and Howard Tedrick, their captain, marked up two gift tosses to ice the game away.

Louis Meets Paycheck If He Defeats Godoy

Bout With Young Iowa Heavy Tentatively Scheduled for April 5 If Champ Beats Chilean Tomorrow

By the United Press

New York, Feb. 7.—If Heavyweight Champion Joe Louis retains his title Friday night against Arturo Godoy, of Chile, his next opponent will be Johnny Paychek, of Des Moines.

In making that announcement tonight, Promoter Mike Jacobs mentioned no site nor date, but it is expected that the Louis-Paychek bout will be staged at Madison Square Garden on April 5.

If Louis loses the title to Godoy at the Garden Friday night, naturally the Paychek bout will be off, and Godoy will defend the title against Louis in a return bout in the summer.

Jacobs and Paychek's manager, Harold Steinman, completed negotiations tonight for the April bout. Terms were not announced.

Jacobs emphasized that the terms could not be announced because they had not been agreed upon.

"Naturally then, Paychek hasn't been signed yet," he added.

Paychek was selected because he never met the Brown Bomber before, because he is rated one of the clearest and fastest heavies in the ring—although not a hard puncher, and because he is working on a string of 33 straight victories. Since the first of the year he beat three opponents in Florida. Peter George, Jerry Lacroix and Huey Long.

Louis completed training today at his Pompton Lakes, N. J., camp. He boxed four fast rounds with his four sparmates, Jim Howell, Clarence Brown, George Nicholson and Emil Scholz. He went at his work eagerly and used his recently sharpened left uppercut more than ever before.

The champion was in an unusually amiable mood, joking with reporters, handlers and sparring partners. On a joint radio program tonight betwen the Louis camp and Godoy's camp at Summit, N. J., Joe gave his listeners many a laugh. For example, after Godoy—in his broken English—had told of his intentions to wrest the crown from Louis, the announcer asked Joe what he had to say about Godoy's remarks. Joe replied, "Guess Ah cain't say anythin', because I couldn't understan' what the man was sayin'."

Both fighters will drive into New York Friday morning for the noon weighing-in. Louis expects to scale 202 pounds, and Godoy 201.

Bowl Players Received $100, Says Official

By the Associated Press

Fresno, Calif., Feb. 7.—A football player who appeared in the Rose Bowl was quoted today by a State education department official as having said he and his teammates "demanded $100 for the game and got it."

W. H. Orion, chief of the division of health, physical education and recreation, declined to identify the player, the team or the section of the country it represented, declaring "it is a confidential matter."

Appearing before the Fresno Breakfast Club, Orion said during an attack on subsidization of athletics:

"I was told by a player who appeared in the Rose Bowl that he and his teammates had demanded $100 for the game and got it. Some day the players will demand $1,000 and there will be no more Rose Bowl.

Basketball—and Take Your Choice

COLLEGE BASKETBALL: Too many cooks, as well as an important foul shot by Matt Zunic, spoiled the broth for Wayne University basketers the other night as George Washington hung up its tenth triumph this season.

BURNETT

Operating without the council of their regular coach, and with Freshman Coach Joe Truskowski holding the reins, the Tartars to a man attempted to master-mind their twelfth game of the year as well as delay the Colonial's not-too-violent excursions goalyard. It didn't work.

First indication that things weren't as they should be came when Howard McCarty, the lanky center whose bespectacled eyes—over which he wears no guard—are said to be insured for $15,000, dashed by his team's bench and shouted to Mr. Truskowski:

"For cryin' out loud, get the Van Vleck's out of here. They don't know which man they're playing, or even what team we're against." The Van Vleck's are Wayne's towering set of twins, John and Bill.

Substitute Coach Truskowski's reaction to McCarty's advice was to pull McCarty out of the game and let him simmer on the bench for ten minutes.

Later in the game another player saw fit to suggest the withdrawal of another mate from the game, and he got the same treatment. If there's one thing that recommends the Colonial squad it's the fact that the players take orders only from Capt. George Garbar and Garbar takes them from Coach Bill Reinhart.

PROFESSIONAL BASKETBALL: Those infrequent fans of the money game who suspected the American Basketball League was all washed up after its recent mergers, transfers, and so forth, have a couple better guesses coming. According to Chris Heurich, jr., and his tiny press agent, Joe Holman, the sport has never done better by itself.

Lats Sunday's meeting of the local Brewers and the Philadelphia Sphas bears out the contention. It also proves the Brewers are doing quite well by themselves, for 800 fans (anyway, as many as the place would hold) jam-packed Heurich gym for the Beermen's first triumph over their arch rivals in 14 games.

By way of putting things straight, here's what happened to cut the A. B. L. from its original eight teams to the present five. Wilkes-Barre dropped out of contention. The Jersey Reds merged with New York Jewels, who won the play-off series last year. Kingston, regular season champion, combined with the Troy Haymakers. And finally Baltimore took over the franchise of Brooklyn Visitation, called its delegation the Clippers, and at present boasts the league's highest scorer in Bob McDermott.

Through all this hubbub, young Mr. Heurich's yen for a winner in his favorite sport was prompting him to add new and better players to his roster. Now you look over the entire bench and see only a couple of familiar faces, but the team is winning.

While Washington is turning out 800-strong, Troy is averaging something like 5,000 fans at each game. The Sphas draw that many, too, and as high as 6,000 or 8,000 to special attractions. Heurich confidently hopes that when (and if) his Brewers move into Riverside Stadium next year, they'll come pretty close to matching the above figures.

HIGH SCHOOL BASKETBALL—Just like the Yankees, it develops that Bethesda-Chevy Chase High's torrid cage team has so much talent it can't all be used.

The team which won its twelfth engagement of the year the other day, has a young "flash," Bob Cremins, on the sidelines and so far has been able to use him only sporadically.

Cremins, those who attended the Post-A. A. U. tournament last year may remember, was the sparkplug of Bethesda A. C.'s attack. He was a one-man team as far as scoring was concerned, averaging eight field goals a game and coming near the high individual record of the tourney.

Now Cremins sits Bethesda's games out, while such stars as Johnny Shumate, Bill Barnsley, Duke Hashagen, Elton McClure and others carry the burden. It's the penalty a good youngster must pay for being with a championship-bound club.

Cremins didn't get to Bethesda without several other high and prep schools waggling inviting fingers. Bethesda got him, though, and he must wait out his apprenticeship.

On the Line

With CONSIDINE

New York, Feb. 7.—Notes so hot:

A trial which might set a precedent costing bookies millions of dollars will pop up in New York soon . . . The indigent (as well as indignant) plaintiff, friend of a lady convicted last summer of misusing his funds, will sue a bookie for $300,000 . . . He will allege that his former gal bet that much with the bookie, away from the race track, in violation of State law . . . actually the old gaffer has precedent on his side, for several years ago a bank collected $32,000 from a bookie by proving that the bookie accepted that amonut from a man who had borrowed it from the bank.

CONSIDINE

There is an old saying in boxing that a colored fighter can't take it "downstairs," yet none of Joe Louis' opponents have ever thought to concentrate on Joe's stomach . . . Galento tried a few shots which scored well, then, like the others began swinging for Louis' head and nearly got brained . . . Arturo Godoy, the mild bull of the pampas, promises to swing for Louis' North Temperate Zone, and let the chips (and Chileans?) fall where they may . . .

Louis' Mark Excelled Only by Armstrong

Louis' record of 37 knockouts, six decisions and one knockout scored against him, in 44 professional fights, would be difficult to believe if Henry Armstrong didn't have the appalling record of 46 consecutive victories, 27 straight knockouts, 54 fights with one loss, three titles won in ten months, and 16 defenses of a title . . . Mike Jacobs is supposed to have given his okay to the Garcia-Armstrong fight on the coast after Garcia agreed to fight Ken Overlin here in March.

Roy Cullenbine got off to a good start as a Dodger by taking his $25,000 bonus in one hunk . . . Benny McCoy and Tommy Henrich staggered their bonus dough payments, Henrich taking his $20,000 at $5,000 a crack for four years . . . So many responsible baseball men are muttering that Walter O. Briggs lent Connie Mack the money to buy McCoy (with the understanding that Mack would toss Briggs an outfielder) that Connie ought to take time out from his mooning for another pennant to deny or confirm it.

Don Budge will get $6,000 for a brief barnstorm in Mexico . . . The next time you hear a golfer say, "I could feel the head of my club carry that ball along," tell him he's nuts . . . High speed cameras have recently proved that the clubhead and ball are in contact for only one-tenth of an inch of the swing, or 1-500's of a second . . . A human can't "feel" in that tiny flit of time and space.

Chartak in Line for Trial at First

The Yanks are going to try Mike Chartak at first base . . . He hit in the .340's for Newark last year and played what I have nicknamed the initial sack for a month.

Something comical about Bill Bingham's eloquent radio plea to colleges to cut out hypocrisy and either pay the boys in the open or make them turn amateur . . . It went out over an international short-wave hookup Tuesday night, and by this time probably half the foreign code decoders have gone screwy trying to attach a sinister meaning to such strange words as " tramp athlete, football bums, proselyte, subsidize, etc."

Joe Louis pays his sparring partners $25 a day, where once he paid them $8 and later $15 . . . The pay raises were demanded by them because he was incorrigibly knocking them out, so now he takes it easy . . . Lew Diamond, the Honest Brakeman, is promoting a fight tomorrow night in Baltimore between Billy McDowell, of Dallas, and Francisco Montanari, of Rome, for what he calls "The Rough-House Welterweight Championship of the World" . . . Tony Galento, naturally, will referee, and has promised to "leave the bums moider theirself."

Ruth Passes 46th Milestone

By the United Press

"When you reach my age," he said, "it's time to step aside and let some of the youngsters have their chance. You miss the crowds roaring and all that sort of thing, but when age creeps up you've just gotta take it."

Surrounded by pictures, cartoons and mementoes of the Ruthian era, the Babe said: "I hardly ever think about returning to baseball any more. I'm well off with nothing to worry about. Of course if some major league club wanted me as manager, I'd go back to the game."

He plays golf four times a week, and keeps close to the mid-seventies when he's in form. He devotes some time to hunting, but he leaves the "big game" shooting to the fellows who are not bothered by too much walking.

Cliff Spencer Out as Golf Professional at Beaver Dam Club

Porash, N. J., Man Being Considered

Contract of M. A. Open Champion Not To Be Renewed, Says Spokesman for Club

Cliff Spencer and the Beaver Dam Country Club, where he has been golf professional for more than seven years, have come to a parting of the ways, The Post learned last night. The Baltimorean's contract will not be renewed, it was revealed, and the Prince Georges Country Club is considering employing Arthur J. Porash, now professional at the Murray Hill Country Club, of Summit, N. J.

A spokesman for the club would not elaborate on circumstances leading up to the break with Spencer but said that it was agreed that a change would be better for all concerned. It was recalled that Spencer had resigned at least once during previous off seasons and had returned to the club later.

In addition to his duties at Beaver Dam, Spencer is well known hereabouts for his competitive golf. A former Maryland Open champion, Spencer won the Middle Atlantic Open championship last October against a good field at the Columbia Country Club.

At present Spencer is making the winter tour with the Nation's top-flight professionals. Although he has been prominent in early stages, he has thus far failed to finish in the money in any of the various tournaments.

Several members of the club are familiar with the work Porash, chief among possible successors to Spencer, whose affiliation with golf has been more as an instructor than as a player.

Walsh Leads Tech Victory Over St. John's

Sinks 2 Foul Shots and Basket in Extra Period To Avenge Earlier Season Defeat; Scores 12 Points; Cady Leads Johnnies' Attack

Jack Walsh, chunky guard of McKinley High's cage team, gave his mates a thrilling 35-33 overtime victory over St. John's yesterday on the Tech floor, tying the score in the last few seconds of play with two successive foul shots and ramming home a two-pointer on a beautiful field effort in the extra period.

It was Tech's revenge for an earlier 28-24 loss to the Johnnies, and a comeback after the Maroons' last outing in which they lost an overtime decision to Gonzaga.

Besides winning the game for the team, Walsh's crucial pair of free throws and his running pivot shot a few seconds later gave him scoring honors of the game, 12 points. Marshall Dellinger, dependable little captain, hung up 10. High scoring for the losers was split between Frank Cady, the District's point leader, and bespectacled Herby Munhall, each with nine points.

As fine a rally as has been seen in schoolboy engagements this year was responsible for the Manual Trainers' victory as much as Walsh's deciding points. Trailing from the first few seconds of the opening period until late in the last quarter, Tech overcame a nine-point Johnnie advantage to tie the count.

The score at the first period was 7-5 in St. John's favor and at the half it was 16-11. Gradually the Claret five widened the margin on the strength of Munhall's surprising manufacture of points, until a 28-19 distance separated the clubs with a minute of the third session left. Walsh cut that to 28-20 on a foul shot, and Dutch Teeple and Dellinger started the last period with successive two-pointers.

Dick Hathaway and Munhall then scored three of St. John's five points in the period, but Dellinger, Buddy Webb and Charley Ellis quickly brought the count to a mere 33-31 deficit. It was Walsh's turn to go into action at that point.

Wilson High Defeats A. U. Jayvees, 37-23

Fugler and MacDonald Set Scoring Pace for Winning Team

Woodrow Wilson's fast basketball entry continued its mad rush to the forefront of local scholastic cage ranks by handing American University Jayvees a 37-23 setback yesterday on the Wilson court.

Failure to halt the prolific scoring of Bart Fugler and Mokie MacDonald cost the Jayvees the game. The pair scored 22 points between them, or one less than the entire A. U. team.

As in past engagements, an early lead was an important factor in Wilson's victory. With Fugler handling the bulk of the scoring department the Presidents stepped out strongly, annexing an 11-5 lead at the end of the first quarter.

Good Foul Shooting

American cut Wilson's lead somewhat in the second quarter as it cashed in on some perfect foul shooting to trail Wilson by 17-13 at the end of the first half. Harry Fine and Tom Etchison's free throws sandwiched between Norford's field goal featured the losers' play in the second period. Etchison, incidentally, was forced to leave the game near the end of this period because of a cut he sustained over his eye.

Wilson started the second half as if it were preparing to make a shambles of the game, ringing up 7 straight points before the Jayvees were able to counter with a field goal.

Continue Attack

The Presidents continued to outclass American in the fourth quarter as Fugler, shackled in the third period by the invaders' puzzling zone defense, broke out in another scoring rash to place the game beyond American's reach.

American's chief asset yesterday was perfect foul shooting. In all, the Eagles attempted 11 free throws and dropped every one through the cords. Its shooting from the floor, however, left something to be desired, as did its passing.

Wilson, on the other hand, used the game as an excellent tune-up for its all-important interhigh engagement with Roosevelt Friday night. The Green showed improvement in its passing but its shooting and erratic work under the basket will stand considerable polish.

Episcopal High Five Bows to Virginia Frosh

Cavaliers Win 7th Victory in 24-16 Game; Welfley Stars

Alexandria, Va., February 7.—Its undefeated record imperiled for three periods by a hard-fighting Episcopal High School quint, the University of Virginia's crack freshman five turned on the heat in the last quarter to turn back the local prepmen, 24 to 16, in a thrill-a-minute contest here today. It was the Cavaliers' seventh successive victory and Episcopal's fourth setback in eight attempts.

Bill Welfley, Virginia guard, personally ushered in the Virginia triumph in the final stanza, after his teammates had trailed their scholastic rivals for three quarters. Eight of the 9 points he scored during the game were recorded in the final period, and played a major role in offsetting the 15-to-14 advantage held by the Maroons at the three-quarter mark.

The first half of the contest set a new low for scoring in Episcopal's new Centennial Gym, and saw the Maroons on the long end of a 5-to-4 score at the intermission. Four minutes of the opening quarter went by before either team scored, and at the end of the period only 5 points had been tallied as the Maroons led, 3 to 2.

For three periods the frosh were unable to solve the Maroons' leech-like man-for-man defense, and were forced to resort mainly to long shots. Big Bill Manier, Maroon center, played a big part in the Episcopal defense by virtue of a great exhibition under the basket, while Frank Wideman also helped throttle the Cavalier offense.

United Faces Regal In Tech's Feature

The United Typewriter and Regal Clothiers fives, ardent rivals in Washington for several years, clash tomorrow night in the "crucial" game of the first half series in the McKinley division of the Recreational League. The battle, in which the winner takes the first half title, is booked for the Tech High gymnasium, starting at 8 o'clock. While the Clothiers are products of playground and independent court circles, the Uniteds are former college players for the most part. However, in previous meetings the rivals have staged point-for-point battles.

Kekeris Wins Golden Glove Feature Bout

Guardsman Has Mancini Wobbly; Steele, Landis, Sneider Are Winners

By Al Hailey

A whilwind finish by Defending Champion Billy Kekeris, of the National Guard, left Nick Mancini, of Pete's A. C., wobbling on one knee, badly beaten and battered, and kept the semifinals of the Golden Gloves boxing tournament from turning into "Mancini night" at Turner's Arena.

Nick was well on the way to the dubious honor of fighting his brother, Johnny, in next week's finals for the 147-pound championship until that fatal third round in which Billy settled down to work with such deadly earnestness.

A sellout crowd of more than 1,500 fans was on its feet throughout the round as the southpaw Kekeris opened a cut over Nick's right eye and knocked him all over the ring before finally battering him to the floor just before the final bell rang.

Nick Takes Lead

Nick, who defeated Kekeris in their first meeting last October in Griffith Stadium, had piled up a wide margin in the first two rounds, and the decision favoring Kekeris drew a long round of boos and a threat from Pete's A. C. to withdraw its entrants from the tournament.

Mancini drove Kekeris all around the ring in the second round and had him in a bad way. Billy was a changed man in the third, however, and there was no doubt about the bewilderment on Nick's face and the beating Kekeris gave him.

In one of the bitterest battles seen in anybody's ring here recently, Carl Steele, of St. Mary's Boys Club, battered a game and determined Bernie Morris, unattached, into submission in a bruising three-round battle which saw both boys on the verge of knockouts at one time or another.

Steele Gets Verdict

Steele knocked Morris skittering across the ring twice in the second round and almost sent him out of the ropes with a looping right hand that literally exploded on Morris' jaw. Morris was hanging limply on the ropes and Referee Eddie LaFond was about to halt the business when Morris wheeled about, said he was O. K., and proved it by driving Steele back before a relentless two-handed attack. But Steele was too rugged and took the decision.

Leo Warcopulos, of Police Boys' Club No. 5, greeted the National Guard's Bobby Hockenberry with a sizzling left hook in the first round of the lightweight encounter, floored him with a right to the head for a nine count in the second round, and then contented himself by stabbing Bobby's face raw in the third, to take a unanimous decision.

The novice division again turned out some of the fastest action of the night and saw Charley Schneider, of Colmar-Manor A. C., floor Bernie Cady, 126 pounds, unattached, twice for nine counts to take a surprise upset decision.

Rallies to Win

Cady, a "dark horse" candidate for the "outstanding novice fighter," flicked his right into Schneider's face in the first round and knocked him flat. Then the Colmar-Manor lad came back to slap Bernie, dizzy with looping rights and lefts.

Ray Landis, Phil Furr's lightweight protege, went down twice in the second round of his battle with Lew Burgess, of Pete's A. C., for nine counts but rallied to win a decision.

Probably the hardest blow of the night in the lighter brackets was landed by Harry Kelly, Police Boys' Club No. 10. He swung a dynamite-laden left hand that closed the eye of Olympic A. C.'s John Allis in the first round but lost the decision.

NOVICE DIVISION

118-pound class—Paul Coakley (Pete's A. C.) outpointed Charley Petro (No. 5), 3 rounds.

126-pound class—John Allis (Olympic) outpointed Harry Kelly (No. 10), 3 rounds. Charles Schneider (Colmar Manor) outpointed Bernie Cody (unattached), 3 rounds.

SENIOR DIVISION

118 pounds—Jack Wadsworth (Pete's A. C.) outpointed Bernie Hardy (unattached), 3 rounds.

Automotive Bowlers Set Season Marks

Arcade-Pontiac Team Shines; Snooks and Anderson Are Stars

The Arcade-Pontiac team went wild in the Washington Automotive League at the Ice Palace Alleys last night and set four season records. Wesley Snooks rolled 165 for high game, John Anders turned in 418 for high set while the game of 677 and set of 1,800 was the best of the year in the circuit. Arcade-Pontiac took three from Wolfe but the league-leading Emerson and Orme team retained its advantage by blanking Capital Cadillac.

In the Chesapeake & Potomac Telephone Co. (men) league, Hal Caster and Bill Warner rolled identical 138s. Caster had the high set of 372. The Michigan team had high set of 624 and game of 1,685.

ARCADIA

Helene Semon, of Dupont, turned in a season record in the C. & P. (ladies) League when she spilled 135 pins. Jessie Keith, of General Office, had the best set of 331. North carried of team honors with 509 and 1,471.

LUCKY STRIKE

Julie Singer, of Wardman Park Market, starred in the District Grocery Store League. He had 147 and 408, his team also topping the action with 624 and 1,840.

In the Lucky Strike Ladies' League, Edna Stanton, of Up-N-At-M, rolled 132 as her club took two. Gertrude Rasch paced Social Security to a season record game of 557. Miss Rasch had a 335 set. Her team had high set of 1,478.

The leading Personnel team took down the honors in the Commissioners Ladies' League. Virginia Rhoades rolled 116 and 339 while her team totaled 497 and 1,419.

Irene Gochenour, of Martha Chapter, paced the Ladies' Eastern Star League, getting 121 and 331. Bethany had 579 and 1,520 while taking three from Mizpah.

TEMPLE

In the Temple Minor League rolled last night, McKee Pontiac won three games from Lloyd's to hold league lead by two games. Eastern Pharmacy won two from Bresnahan Tinners. The Pharmacy team had high game of 596 and a high team set of 1,722.

E. Guiliani's 146 game and 378 set helped the Boveglio Club win two games from Miller Furniture Co. New Deal made a clean sweep against Lord Baltimore. Loggice Roma took two from Standard Brands and Frank's Tavern won two from Bright Star Liquor.

LADIES DISTRICT LEAGUE

Arcade Pontiac swept its series with Ice Palace, and at the same time took every honor for the night. The team combined for game of 621 and set of 1,720, and Ida Wineberg rolled 166 and 361 for individual highs.

Miss Snell Seeks U. S. Skate Title

D. C. Star Competes In National Event at Cleveland Tomorrow

For the first time, Washington will be represented in the national figure skating championships. Dorothy Snell, who last year competed under the banner of the Baltimore Figure Skating Club, will carry the hopes of the Washington Figure Skating Club into competition at Cleveland tomorrow and Saturday.

Accompanied by her mother, the 17-year-old Montgomery-Blair High School student, left last night for the Ohio city. They will be joined there by Bill Swallender, skating professional, who has been Miss Snell's instructor for more than two years.

She has been doing most of her practicing this year at Riverside Stadium although the fact that Swallender is employed in Baltimore has forced her to make frequent trips to the Monumental City.

This will be the first appearance of Miss Snell in senior competition. After placing in the novice class, she moved up to the juniors in 1938 and was runner-up. Last year, she gained a similar position despite limited practice opportunities.

Joan Tozzer, of Boston, has won the national senior title for the past two years but it is not known whether she will defend her title this week-end.

The favorite in the competition, regardless of Miss Tozzer's decision, will be Heddy Stenuff, who learned to skate in Vienna and was third in the world championships three years ago. Miss Stenuff will represent the Chicago Figure Skating Club.

Optimistic Phillie Hurler Wants Job Of Pitching Opener

He wrote President Gerald Nugent today he was accepting his 1940 contract, requested he be allowed to pitch the opening game and said "I feel as if I am going to win 20 games this season."

Higbe, secured from Chicago last year in a deal which sent Claude Passeau to the Cubs, has been spending the winter at his home in Columbia, S. C. He won 12 and lost 15 last season and, Nugent said, was given a pay increase.

At the same time, club officials announced Outfielder Gordon Troy, Gordon, Pa., a recruit from the Phils' farm club at Moultrie, Ga., had signed. They indicated also a deal with the New York Giants for First Baseman Zeke Bonura was definitely off.

"The Giants started talking in figures we couldn't understand," Nugent explained.

Evans, Referee Will Oppose Lou Plummer

Mat Villian Promises To Throw Both on Arena Card Tonight

The question of whether to risk Referee Casey Berger in the ring tonight when Villains Lou Plummer and Don Evans take over for the feature wrestling exhibition had Promoter Joe Turner gnawing his nails last night.

PLUMMER

Plummer has a strong aversion for anything resembling Berger, according to the word being passed around yesterday, and has taken a vow to tear Casey to pieces along with Evans.

"He done me wrong last week when he threw me out of the ring after I licked that guy Evans." Lou complained eloquently. Tonight's affair is a return match as a result of that disqualification of Plummer for roughness.

If Berger does take over the officiating, he'll have to undergo the ire of another bit of dramatics with Joe Cox in a preliminary. Cox claims he also "wuz wronged" by Berger last week. Cox will waltz with Alan Eustace.

The slaughter begins at 8:30 p. m., and the other artists on the card are Tommy O'Toole vs. Chief White Feather, Tommy Rae vs. John Judiski and Don McIntyre vs. Jim Austeri.

Y. M. C. A. Handball Players Win 3 Matches

Y. M. C. A. handball players won three out of four matches last night in the second round of the singles in the District A. A. U. tournament held at Y. M. C. A. courts.

Jack Schwartz (Y. M. C. A.) defeated Saul Hearn (J. C. C.), 21—8, 21—3.

Jack Seid (J. C. C.) defeated H. E. Bethon (Y. M. C. A.), 21—2, 21—1.

G. Goldstein (Y. M. C. A.) defeated A. Simmons (J. C. C.), 21—8, 21—5.

Tonight the doubles semifinal will be played, starting at 8 o'clock at the Y courts.

Dunade Scores Head Victory on Sloppy Track at Hialeah

Place Award To Olympus; Only 3 Start

Winner Pays $4.80 In Exciting Duel; Puro Oro Triumphs Over Juvenile Field

By the Associated Press

Hialeah Park, Fla., Feb. 7.—Dunade, a mud-loving veteran from the stable of Mrs. F. L. Flanders, scored a thrilling head victory over William Woodward's Olympus in the feature Grade B Handicap here today. Mrs. E. L. Martin's Supreme Sir, the favorite, was a poor third, a half dozen lengths away. The time was 1:51 4-5.

Heavy rains overnight and early this morning flooded the racing strip and left it deep in slop. The water had not yet penetrated all the way through, however, and a fairly firm bottom remained. Scratches marred the card. The feature of a mile and a furlong drew only three starters, a rarity for a mutuels track. There was straight betting only on this contest and, due to the registration machinery of the "tote" failing to function properly, quite a delay followed the running before the proper odds could be calculated.

After some delay, it was announced over the loud speaker system that Dunade paid $4.80 for $2.

Widener Eligibles

Olympus and Supreme Sir are eligible for the $50,000 Widener Cup event March 2. Olympus, winner of the London Cup in England before being returned to this country last fall, was making his second start at the current meeting. He won the Bryan and O'Hara Memorial Handicap at Bowie in this third American start, but performed dismally here in his winter debut. As expected, the Gallant Fox 5-year-old improved considerably today, but not quite enough to equal the performance of Dunade.

The card opened with a 3-furlong dash for maiden juveniles. Puro Oro, the $7.10 for two choice, outran 10 others with little effort. Second to the speedy Painted Veil in her one previous effort, Puro Oro registered by three lengths in 0:34 2-5. Hi Pov, a long shot, was a fast finishing second, a half length before Cook Book.

Yes Or No Winner

Maiden 3-year olds and upward stepped 6 furlongs in the fourth. Mrs. Payne Whitney's Yes or No, appearing for the first time this winter, lived up to expectations by scoring a five-lengths triumph under Don Meade. Samuel D., was a driving second, a length and a half better than Dog House. Yes or No shot right to the front, opened up a wide advantage and galloped the remained of the trip. He returned $4.10.

Motley was an easy winner of the third race, decided over the 1 mile and 1 furlong distance. The veteran led Mobcap home by four lengths, while maneuver was beaten six lengths for the place. Billy Van Nuys, a cantankerous plater that threw his rider in a recent race, broke with his company and then abruptly pulled himself up, refusing to go any farther.

Motley followed Mobcap and Maneuver to the middle of the last bend. Merrill Packer then urged the old fellow to the front. The combination drew out steadily and paid the talent $4.90.

AFFIRMATION, outrun in the early stages, also came through between the leaders after straightening out in the stretch and outlasted LINA'S SON. MOTLEY, under stout restraint and saving ground until midway around the turn, swung to the outside entering the stretch and drew clear under pressure, but was taken in hand at the finish. MOBCAP displayed good speed, but was no match for the winner. MANEUVER, always prominent, faltered in the final furlong. BILLY VAN NUYS broke, then wheeled.

FOURTH RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $1,000. For maiden 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from Puett gate. Won easily; place driving. Went to post 3:41. Off 3:41½. Winner, Greentree Stable's ch. c. Two-dollar mutuels paid—YES OR NO, $4.10, $3.30, $2.90; SAMUEL D., $7.70, $5.00; DOG HOUSE, $4.00.

YES OR NO assumed command at once, held the field safe for speed and was never menaced. SAMUEL D. moved up stoutly entering the stretch, but never seriously threatened the winner. DOG HOUSE saved ground entering the stretch and easily shook off the others. PARI-LEROY closed a good gap.

FIFTH RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $1,100; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good from Puett gate. Won handily; place driving. Went to post 4:11. Off 4:11. Winner, T. P. Morgan's b. m. Two-dollar mutuels paid—EARLY AUTUMN, $10.30, $5.10, $4.00; CALEXICO, $4.80, $3.40; SUPREME SPEED, $2.90.

EARLY AUTUMN, displaying high speed in the going, drew out into a good lead entering the stretch and won with something in reserve. CALEXICO, nearest in pursuit of the leader throughout, finished gamely, but could not overhaul the winner. SUPREME SPEED, well up and saving ground all the way, was easily best of the others. WISE BARRISTER did not appear to favor the footing.

SIXTH RACE—One and one-eighth miles. Purse, $1,500. Grade B Handicap. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from Puett gate. Won driving; place same. Went to post 4:41. Off 4:41. Winner, Mrs. F. L. Two-dollar mutuels paid—DUNADE, $4.80, out, out; OLYMPUS, out, out; SUPREME SIR, out. (No place or show mutuels sold.)

DUNADE, reserved off the pace until approaching the stretch turn, moved up with determination on the outside, assumed command and outlasted OLYMPUS in the final drive. OLYMPUS set a fast pace while saving ground, continued gamely when the final test came, but could not stave off the winner's challenge. SUPREME SIR, under strong restraint in the first 5 furlongs, failed to respond when called upon.

SEVENTH RACE—One and one-eighth miles. Purse, $1,200. Grade C Handicap. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from Puett gate. Won driving; place same. Went to post 5:11. Off 5:11. Winner, H. P. Two-dollar mutuels paid—FLYING LEE, $4.70, $3.30, out; BOSLEY, $4.20, out; HARP WEAVER, out. (No show mutuels sold.)

FLYING LEE, kept in close pursuit of the leader from the start, was carried wide entering the stretch, but closed gamely and fast to wear BOSLEY down and won going away. BOSLEY, displaying excellent speed while being rated in front, appeared to hold a safe lead in the final furlong, but weakened suddenly. HARP WEAVER moved up gamely around the leader turning into the stretch and was bumped by the winner, came again when clear and would have been second in another stride. SHOT PUT was going strongly at the end. DNIEPER stumbled midway around the turn.

EIGHTH RACE—One and three-sixteenths miles. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good from Puett gate. Won driving; place same. Went to post 5:45½. Off 5:46. Winner, C. S. Two-dollar mutuels paid—PRESIDENTIAL, $10.00, $5.80, out; KIEVEX, $5.10, out; REDBREAST, out. (No show mutuels sold.)

PRESIDENTIAL forced a steady pace from the start, raced WHITE GINGER into defeat, opened up a winning lead through the stretch, but was kept under strong pressure to the end. KIEVEX, closer up than usual, responded gamely, but could not overhaul the winner. REDBREAST, badly outrun to the last quarter mile, finished with a belated rush on the outside. STABLE had no excuses.

Selections at Hialeah Park

Dear Al;

Tell the truth, I don't mind getting fan mail that refers to me as as "Drip" or a "Fat Slob" or a "Mr. Know-Nothing." In fact, I don't even kick when I get these communications written on a penny postal card. From time to time, I have printed these sweet morsels. Perhaps you remember the one from my Laurel, Md., friend who wrote that he could not get along without my selections because he always used them to eliminate three horses in each race. So pardon me, if I pass this one along. So help me this lawyer Benningite isn't a relative. Here it is:

"I wish to congratulate you on your article appearing in The Post regarding race horse fans losing their dough because horses are put in races for "workouts" instead of running to win. I'll bet there isn't a fan in the United States who doesn't back you up 100%. If they cut out this unfair practice, more people would attend the races and the tracks would prosper.

"I wish there were more newspaper men like you. Your stand on the Simpson case and on making provision for injured jockeys and jockeys killed in races, and your present stand on the matter referred to above, puts you in a class by yourself and we all admire you. If all the newspapers would get behind you, these things would be cleared up overnight.

"They could prepare simple forms to be signed by the jockeys and trainers to the effect that their horse is out to win and not for a workout, and a statement to be signed by the jockey to the effect that he has received no instructions from the trainer or the owner that in any way interferes with the horse making every effort to win the race in which he is running. I'll bet the jockeys would welcome such a rule with enthusiasm. Lawyers have to sign statements of a somewhat similar nature in many cases, so why should jockeys or trainers object to such a procedure? If the racing associations want to give the public a fair break, why don't they adopt such a procedure immediately?"

Thank you doctor. BILL.

First race—Belle Town has been passed along as a good thing in the day's opener. The clockers have put their O. K. on this one and I'm going to string along. Socratic and Classic Beauty are regarded as promising juveniles and probably will take part in the distribution of the purse.

Second race—Rose-Ouzel gets in this with a steadying weight assignment and I have reason to believe this one will do a lot of running. George Seabo has been waiting around to ride the 3-year-old. Maetran has a high speed figure and deserves attention. Lucky Me, despite 122 pounds, is a threat.

Third race—Noddles, a winner this season, appears to have a slight edge on the company involved in this sprint. Alfred Robertson is slated to do the riding and he's better than a green hand. Kleig Light, and Arched have shown speed and are dangerous.

Fourth race—My Mommy, with Jack Flinchum to do the booting, gets my call in this affair. The weight and the route are right. Wildmute will be in there knocking and looks the part of a serious contender. Baltee could take it all.

Fifth race—The promise of an off track should enhance the chances of Crepe. Any price will be a good one. Floragina and Bucking have shown enough recently to warrant respect.

Sixth race—Argonne Woods will like the long route and will have the capable Jockey Donoso in the saddle. I'm going to string along with this one over the turf course. Tonganoxie has class and will be close up. Hard Way could steal a lead on this gang and is a possible surprise.

Seventh race—Lady Orchid has downed better than these and, although generally regarded as a sprinter, she has been known to carry her speed over a long route. Depthbomb and Cossack Girl may fill out the money bracket.

Eighth race—Sun Mica will like the off track and the mile and an eighth. Ability for the rough going may offset any class edge his rivals have on him. Seed is good as gold now but that 122 pounds may hinder his chances. Room Service is improving.

Best bet—Noodles.

League Warns Eagles; 3 Men On Probation

Message Arrives as Club Prepares for Orioles Tomorrow

The Washington Eagles, attempting to overhaul the second place Baltimore Orioles in the Eastern Amateur Hockey League race, yesterday received a sharp warning from the Eastern League's front office.

The Eagles, who are to entertain the Orioles at Riverside Stadium tomorrow night, invade Atlantic City for a match with the Sea Gulls Saturday night, and play host to the Sea Gulls in their first Sunday night match here, appeared on the border line of losing three players because of excess penalties

Paul Courteau, Bill Davies and Johnny McTeer, valuable Eagle players, each have a major and misconduct penalty charged against them, while Eddie Powers, jr., of Atlantic City, has two majors. Further serious penalties incurred by any of these boys at this time would result in their suspension, seriously impairing the team.

The Orioles are bringing back to Washington Kelly, their great goalie, who is credited with five shutouts this season, and Norm Calladine, fifth ranking scorer, who was credited with two goals and two assists against the Eagles his last two times out.

Statistics released by the Eastern League office yesterday disclose that Albert Collings, of the New York Rovers, has smashed the all-time Eastern League individual scoring record with 78 points. Nurdo McKay and Frank Boucher, jr., also of the Rovers, are second and third among the point makers, with 64 and 61 points, respectively, and Hal Dewey, of the Eagles, is fourth with 59. Baltimore's Norm Calladine has 58.

With the Temple bench sending in reserves at each whistle, the time went slowly, but not slowly enough for the Owls. Nicol managed for one more two-pointer with 30 seconds to play, but that was the extent of the Temple rally.

A high-scoring preliminary ended in a 51-46 triumph for Federal Bureau of Investigation over the Hoya yearlings.

Noonan Scores 39 Points in Game

"Big Bill" Noonan, former Eastern High School and George Washington University basketball star, last night set gymnasium scoring record as United Typewriters routed Marvin's Credit, 62-32, in Heurich Amateur Basketball League competition.

Noonan, hitting the hottest pace of his lengthy career, scored 17 field goals and five fouls for 39 points. Gerald Burns, of D. and H. Coal, had set the high mark previously with 28 points in a single contest.

Delaware and Hudson nosed out United Clay Products, 47 to 44, and the Petworth A. C. defeated Bantam-Press, 40 to 27, in supporting games.

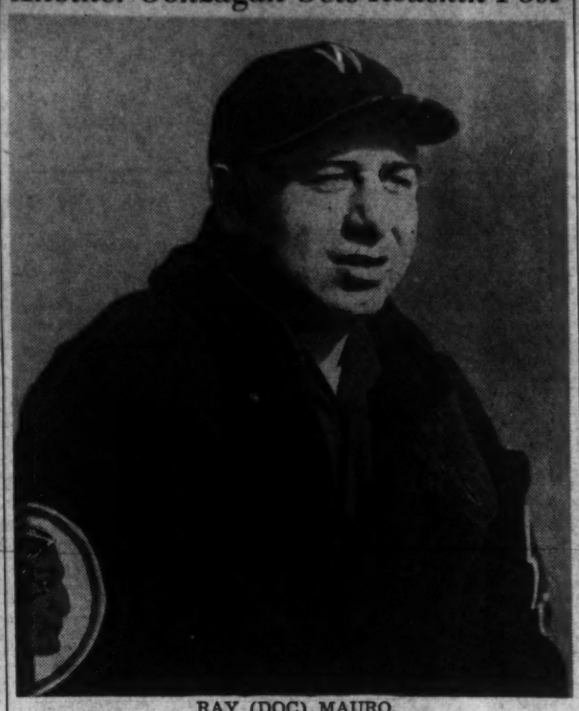
Another Gonzagan Gets Redskin Post



RAY (DOC) MAURO,

Ray Mauro Is Appointed 'Skin Trainer

Former Conditioner At Gonzaga Replaces Baker With Pro Team

Gonzaga University contributed another alumnus to the Washington Redskins' official staff yesterday with the appointment of Ray (Doc) Mauro as trainer of the pro football team in the place of Ray Baker, who has resigned to help keep Warner Brothers film stars in condition.

Mauro, who for 10 years, was trainer at his alma mater in Spokane, Wash., was manager of equipment for the Redskins last year and was considered "ideally situated" for his new job, General Manager Jack Espey announced.

Two Redskin players, Ed Justice and Ray Hare, a newcomer, are graduates of Gonzaga. Coach Ray Flaherty and Maxie Krause, assistant coach, both came from Gonzaga.

Orioles Beat River Vale in Rough Game

By the Associated Press

Baltimore, Feb. 7—Fists and hockey sticks flew, excited fans surged to the ice and the teams finished with the minimum strength of four men each tonight as the Baltimore Orioles took an Eastern Amateur Hockey League game from the River Vale Skeeters, 3 to 0.

It was the roughest game seen here this season and produced 13 penalties, four of them major, resulting from a free-for-all battle in the final period.

The first period was relatively decorous, with no scoring and only three penalties. But Baltimore broke through in the sceond frame, Grigor and Dyte teaming for a score after 5:04.

Goals and penalties came pell mell in the third frame. Grigor, Hunt and Calladine combined for Baltimore's second goal at 3:42, and Calladine punched through another, without help, at 17:58. The hostilities spread to the players' benches, and officials were kept busy quelling off-the-ice clashes between nonplaying performers.

DeWitt Gets Eleven

George DeWitt, Maryland forward, and Bill Rea, Maryland, scored 11 and 10 points, respectively.

Midway in the first period Rea sank three sparkling one-handers in succession and Duvall tallied twice before "Bosh" Pritchard put V. M. I. back in the scoring column. Adam Bengoechea then staged another spurt for Maryland, taking fast passes under the basket for three goals to give the Terrapins a 32-12 lead at intermission.

With rapid-fire dribbling and long passes, Maryland pulled away steadily in the second half despite the long-range shooting of Joe Shomo, Cadet sophomore, who led his team with four field goals.

Difficult Angles

DeWitt and Duvall continued to pace the Maryland attack with shot after shot from difficult angles. The Cadets handled the ball cleverly to penetrate the zone defense but sank few tries after earning clear shots at the basket.

Wheat Prices Yield After Early Rise

Demand From Millers For Flour Stimulates Morning Activity

By the Associated Press

Chicago, Feb. 7.—Wheat prices rallied about a cent at times today, strengthened by reports of improved flour demand and milling activity, but this temporary bulge faded in the final hour and the market closed fractionally lower.

A burst of flour business the past week, principally in the Southwest hard winter wheat area, imparted some strength to the market. Inasmuch as most sales were booked during the recent price decline there was little lifting of hedges in this connection today. Most of the selling was associated with modest profit taking inspired by the price rally of the past two days as well as prospects of more rain or snow over much of the grain belt.

Wheat closed ⅜-⅝ cent lower than yesterday, May 98-98⅛; July, 95⅜-½. Corn was ¼-⅜ down; May, 56⅛-56; July, 56; oats, ¼-⅜ higher; rye, ½-¾ lower, and lard, unchanged to 5 higher.

Copper and Lead Prices are Again Revised Lower

New York, Feb. 7 (AP).—Cash copper and lead were reduced in metal markets today. Two leading producers today reduced domestic electrolytic copper for immediate delivery ⅜ cent a pound to 11¼ cents, New York, and principal suppliers cut lead ¼ cent to 5@5.05 cents a pound, New York.

Both metals moved up sharply last year when the trade anticipated European war. But since the start of 1940 both have been sliding lower in domestic markets.

Copper was selling at 10 cents a pound at mid-1939, then climbed in a series of advances to 12½ cents in October, a quotation maintained until markdowns began in January, this year.

Lead, selling at 4 cents a pound, New York, in May of last year, climbed to a high of 5¼ cents last September. This quotation held until late last month, when the price was pared to 5¼ cents.

Stocks Continue Advance; Rail Equipment Shares in Demand; Bond Market Generally Firm

New York, Feb. 7.—The stock market advanced again today, which makes it two days up in a row. That should call for an investigation. Mitigating circumstances, however, are that the list is still securely locked within the narrow bounds of the last few weeks and the volume of trading is unable to get far away from the half-million share mark. A two-day advance is a novelty, but it may be that another day or two of advancing prices will be necessary before the regulatory authorities will consider it necessary to crack down on the street and save the American people from worse than a profit.

Statistics of the day are pleasant, but not startling. The composite average edged forward 0.28 point, on top of the 0.33 gain of Tuesday, and trading was 491,280 shares. Hogs were steady, cattle held up, wheat was somewhat lower after an early rally, Government bonds were soft and of the 731 issues dealt in on the big board there were 341 gains, with 174 declines and 216 issues unchanged. Wall Street kept its fingers crossed, but as far as is known there was nothing in the above that could cause trouble with Washington.

Railroad Shares Improve

Improvement in the rails contributed to some buying of the equipments. There was continued demand for B.-M.-T. in the traction division, with gains of more than a point in each of the three issues to new highs for the year, but other tractions were quiet. Aviations were active, but price changes were immaterial. There was a degree of softness in the utilities. Steels held firm, ignoring the weakness in scrap prices and the lower rate of operations for the industry. A weak feature was Homestake Mining, which sold down 2⅜ points, but this did not affect the other gold mining issues.

General Motors

Among the motors there was good demand for General Motors in anticipation of the quarterly report to be issued after the close. This showed that the corporation, in 1939, had net earnings available for dividends of $183,300,00, equal after preferred dividends, to $4.04 a share on the common. It compared with $2.17 a share in 1938.

Steel Trade Slows Down

Midweek trade news reflected the quiet easing off of activity. There has been a definite downward trend, but one which has not as yet assumed undue proportions. The wekely review of the steel industry by Iron Age noted a slowing down of new orders to the steel companies and the publication holds that present business is not more than enough to sustain 45 per cent operations. Backlogs have vanished for many items in some companies, it points out. There was also a drop in electric power production for the week ended last Saturday, but the rate is still 11.1 per cent above the like week of a year ago.

Bonds Dull But Firm

Business failed to pick up appreciably on the listed bond market today, but the tone was favorable in almost all departments. Best-grade investment issues proved hesitant because interest centered on the new offering of $25,000,000 Dayton Power & Light obligations, expected tomorrow. Foreign dollar issues moved upward in the belief that extensive assistance will be granted other countries through the the addition to the capital of the Export-Import Bank, already approved by a Senate committee. Many domestic issues of the speculative types were better as well. Turnover was $5,760,000.

United States Treasury issues were dull at previous figures, with most observers now inclined to await terms of the extensive refunding operation probably to be undertaken in March. Best-rated corporate loans were steady, but quiet, as the Dayton Power & Light issues tomorrow will provide another test for the market.

Speculative rails were generally good in the corporate division, with B. & O. bonds the favorites on rumors, later denied, that contingent interest might be paid soon. Puerto-Rican-American Tobacco bonds advanced sharply in the industrial group. Local traction obligations were somewhat uncertain, because of a similar feeling about unification. Other groups were dull.

N. Y. Exchange Considering Jersey Move

Gov. Moore Reports Query to Escape N. Y. State Taxation

By the Associated Press

Trenton, N. J., Feb. 7.—Gov. A. Harry Moore said today that members of the New York Stock Exchange had asked him whether it could "get a break" if they moved the exchange to New Jersey to escape taxation in New York.

The Governor said he would not issue a formal invitation, but believed there was a "good chance" the exchange would move part of its trading to this State. Suitable quarters in Newark or Jersey City could be made available readily, he added.

It would be profitable for the exchange, the Governor pointed out, to transfer to New Jersey its trading in at least the stocks with the greatest bulk of turnover because, in view of the New York State transaction tax, it now was much cheaper to deal in these stocks on the Chicago or Boston exchange.

In 1933 the exchange threatened to move to New Jersey to escape an impending New York City trading tax. Overtures were made to Newark officials for leasing of Center Market, but negotiations were dropped when the then mayor of New York, John P. O'Brien, vetoed the proposed tax ordinances.

Proposition Not Official

The New York Stock Exchange officially has not considered proposals for shifting dealings to New Jersey, a spokesman for the exchange said today.

The exchange, he said, is hopeful the State Legislature at this session will approve a pending bill for downward revision of the New York State transfer taxes on share transactions.

Meanwhile, he added, the exchange itself has not been carrying on "flirtations" with other States.

Some business interests in Connecticut also were reported in brokerage circles seeking to get the exchange invited to that State.

Harry Augenblick, a New Jersey resident and member of the exchange, said he had turned over a letter addressed to him by Gov. A. Harry Moore of New Jersey to the governing authorities of the exchange.

Gov. Moore expressed the belief there was "good chance" the exchange would move part of its trading to New Jersey but did not issue a formal invitation.

Gen. Motors 4th Quarter Profit All-time High

By the Associated Press

New York, Feb. 7.—General Motors Corporation today reported indicated net profits of $73,681,000 for the final three months of 1939, equal after preferred dividends to $1.66 a common share and the largest earnings for any December quarter in history.

For the full year 1938 preliminary net earnings of $183,300,000, subject to final audit, were indicated, equal to $4.04 a common share, the largest since 1937. In 1938 the company earned $102,190,007 or $2.17 a common share.

J. O'Donovan, vice president in charge of traffic for the airline.

Willys Sets Up Shell Casing Plant

Toledo, Ohio, Feb. 7 (AP).—The framework of a department for manufacture of 75-millimeter shell casings is being set up in the Willys-Overland Motors, Inc., plant here. "We're not going into the munitions business unless we are called upon to do so by the Government," President Joseph W. Frazer said today. "We were asked to get into shape for manufacture of casings so we could go into immediate production if the need should arise. We have a lot of automobiles to make, however, and we aim primarily to do a good job in that business."

A veteran machinist was employed to supervise establishment of the department. The Overland plant is one of a score of Toledo factories on a War Department list to be utilized in case of war.

How an "ACC" Auto Loan Cut My Payments $24 a Month

I WAS PAYING $55 a month on a lot of bills I owed around town. There was $28 on the car, $7.50 on the refrigerator, $11 on our furniture, $5 on a doctor bill, and $3.50 on several small bills."

ALL IN ALL I OWED $270 and those payments were setting me down. I didn't have enough left to LIVE on."

THEN I HEARD about "ACC" Auto Loans. Talked it over with their manager and got a $270 loan on my car and paid off all those bills. On their 12-month plan my payments are now only $30.75 a month, and that leaves me $24 to spend on other things. Matter of fact, I'm putting part of that $24 in the bank!"

YOU, TOO, CAN get an "ACC" Auto Loan, on any make car and any model from 1932 to 1940, whether paid for or not. We will cut your payments and advance you the extra cash you need, in 15 minutes.

Contract Bridge

By Florence Osborn.

Today's hand reveals Mrs. Fuller-Fallasis in what Mr. Wolfus would call her characteristic pose of going down on a hand that can be made.

"Mrs. Fuller-Fallasis bought the contract for five diamonds. Carthew led the nine of spades, which the declarer won with her ace. She led the king of diamonds, which I (Wolfus) won, and I promptly returned a spade. Carthew ruffed and Mrs. Fuller-Fallasis displayed her hand.

"'I have to give you a club,' she said regretfully. 'So I am one down. Isn't it terribly bad luck?' she complained.

"'Hardly that!' frankly replied Carthew. 'You should have made your contract. This is another case of being extravagant with an ace for safety's sake.'"

Do you understand what he meant? How would you improve upon the fair lady's play?

Here is what Carthew told her:

"You should have won my nine of spades with dummy's king and immediately played dummy's ace of hearts, upon which you should have discarded your ace of spades. You would then have lost only the two minor aces and would have had the satisfaction of making your contract on careful and thoughtful play."

"Now, who would have thought the second round of spades would be ruffed," that lady replied. "Besides, I wouldn't think of foolishly throwing my ace away for nothing."

'I am beginning to agree with you that aces and kings are a snare and a delusion," remarked Mrs. Fuller-Fallasis.

Sweet Suite

Herbert Stothart, composer of many of Hollywood's brilliant and original musical scores, has again accomplished the unusual in taking Rimsky-Korsakov's ballet suite, "Scheherazade," and presenting it in operatic form in "Balalaika."

One of the greater radio mysteries is the theory of the throw-away. Throw-aways are gadgets sponsors give away to strengthen the popularity of their program or, more often, to aid in a mail check of their programs' following.

There's a throw-away gag running on WJSV now. The sponsors of "Hilltop House," heard each morning at 10:30 o'clock, are giving away a handsome Oriental brooch of simulated jade. Among the thousands of little things the author knows nothing about, "Oriental brooches of simulated jade" are well up among the first 300. However, certain young ladies of my gay set, who have been accepting half-pound boxes of peanut brittle as their just due, get pretty enthusiastic about the brooch.

If you'd like one, listen in on "Hilltop House." And don't send your requests to me. They might easily get lost among the vast horde of receipted bills I get each morning.

Have you ever been worried about what Washington's upper crust is doing these chilly evenings? Would you like to know what gay member of the diplomatic set has the town laughing because he wore his wife's red hat down Pennsylvania avenue? You wouldn't! Well, that sets me back quite a bit, but WJSV has a new program at 2:30 which is well worth the lending of an ear.

It's run by Peter [illegible], a local gazette's skirt-wearing society columnist. Peter is a girl, and quite a girl, at that. She spent a few years behind the footlights before she became a journalist and she still retains the stage's gusty manner of speaking. You take that gusty attitude, mix it well with entree to our best circles, add a bit of the real good reporter and you have a swell radio society editor.

Peter is not overly impressed with the folks of the upper, or non-taxpaying, brackets, but she has a kind heart and little or no viciousness, so her quarter-hour chats are entertaining, but not nasty. She's well worth the loan of an ear every week.

THE DRAGON'S TEETH
By ELLERY QUEEN

Chapter 26

THE INSPECTOR waved Ellery on.

"Deductively, then," said Ellery, "we've established the existence of a person hitherto unsuspected—Ann Bloomer's partner-in-crime, the person she referred to when she boasted that she and some one else had planned the attacks on Kerrie.

"Now Beau told Ann he was marrying Kerrie, that he was taking Kerrie to the Villanoy; he even promised Ann he would leave Kerrie alone for the night, as he did—although for reasons of his own.

"Ann Bloomer must have informed her partner; how else could this partner have known? So the partner went to the Villanoy soon after Beau and Kerrie checked in, found out what room they had engaged, and then sent the hotel a wire reserving Room 1726. I've investigated that wire, incidentally, and it was telephoned to Western Union from a pay-station—no doubt from a booth in or near the Villanoy. Of course, this covered the trail.

"Room 1726 being reserved, this mysterious partner then let himself in with a passkey of some sort, and awaited developments. The partner heard Ann's arrival, heard the entire conversation through the open windows, heard Ann's injudicious boast about the partnership of the attacks on Kerrie, and shot Ann before she could reveal the identity of her partner—himself. Then he tossed Kerrie's own revolver through the windows into 1724. Ann herself had said she and her partner had planned the attacks on Kerrie, so it's not strange that this partner had possession of Kerrie's stolen .22."

"I imagine," continued Ellery gravely, "that this partner had three motives for killing Ann Bloomer.

"Remember Ann's character, her unscrupulousness, her known record for loose living on the Continent her self-incriminating confession of attempts to murder Kerrie. And think of the situation existing between her and her partner. With the proofs of identity presented by her and accepted by the executor-trustees of the estate and by the surrogate, she found herself in the driver's seat.

"She no longer needed a partner—any partner; he had served his purpose by giving her the Margo-Cole proofs of identity. She could back down on her bargain with this partner without danger to herself—that is, she could refuse to share the profits with the partner who supplied her with the means of making those profits. And what could this partner do about it?—nothing. To expose the woman as an impostor meant exposing and incriminating himself.

"So the partner lost his share of the loot without a comeback. Natural motive on his part? Revenge.

"SECOND motive: Fear. Ann Bloomer, a woman with a police record, might be unmasked as an impostor at any time, through the merest mischance. If caught, she would certainly involve her silent and invisible partner. As a matter of fact, when Ann boasted to Kerrie in the hotel room that she and somebody else had planned the murderous attacks, and actually stated: 'I and somebody else. I and—' . . . the partner shot her dead instantly. He couldn't afford to have her reveal his identity. Dead men don't bite. Nor, for that matter, do dead women."

Ellery paused, and Beau said: "You said there were three motives. What's the third?"

"That," replied Mr. Queen, "can wait. Aren't two sufficient?"

"Why couldn't Kerrie have been the Bloomer woman's partner?" demanded the inspector. "Forgetting all this business of Room 1726 and Kerrie's story."

"Come, come, dad, you're confused. Kerrie's the last person on earth who could have been Anne's partner-in-crime. If Kerrie originally possessed the proofs of Margo Cole's identity—a vast improbability by itself—whether the real Margo Cole were alive or dead, would Kerrie have engineered the imposture and thereby set up a competing heiress? For if the real Margo didn't come forward, Kerrie would have had the income from the entire estate, not half. No, dad, Kerrie didn't need a partner."

Inspector Queen nibbled the end of his mustache. "Where's the proof of all this?"

"We're not ready to submit proof."

"The circumstantial case against the girl is too strong, Ellery. Even if I were convinced, there's Sampson. The D. A. simply can't drop these charges without proof."

Beau winked at Ellery and took him aside. They conferred sotto voce for some time.

Ellery looked worried. But he finally nodded and said to his father: "All right. You'll have your proof. I'm going to let Beau run this show, because it's fundamentally his inspiration."

"Let me handle this," said Beau eagerly, "and you'll have your killer in 24 hours—yes, and a whole lot more besides!"

"It shouldn't take more than 24 hours," agreed Mr. Queen. "Yes, I think we can promise that."

The inspector hesitated. Then he threw up his hands. "All right. What do you want me to do?"

AT 9 O'CLOCK that night the main office of Ellery Queen, Inc., was crowded. The shades had been drawn and all the lights were on. On the desk stood some apparatus. A headquarters expert sat near the apparatus, looking puzzled.

Kerrie was there in charge of a detective and a matron. She and Violet Day sat in a corner. Vi was nervous. Every few moments Kerrie had to lean over and reassure her. At other times Kerrie kept her eyes on Beau with a faith patient, secret and maternal.

Beau was jumpy. Mr. Queen took him aside. "You're skittering. Look confident, you big ape. You're acting more like an expectant father than anything else of a human nature."

"It's the look in Kerrie's eye," groaned Beau. "You suppose it's going to turn out okay? You're sure you got that message straight?"

"Capt. Angus and the coast operative landed at Newark Airport all right, I tell you," said Ellery impatiently. "They're coming here under police escort and all the trimmings. Get going, will you?"

"I'm all atwitter," said Beau with a feeble grin.

"And you show it! The whole secret of this business is to act Jovian. You're Messiah. You know it all. A temblor couldn't shake your confidence. Go ahead!"

Beau breathed hard. He stepped forward, and Mr. Queen retired to lean against the door to the reception room.

Beau described in rapid detail the circumstances of Cadmus Cole's visit to that very office three months before, of how the multimillionaire had engaged Ellery's services in an investigation which "turned out to be the search for Cole's heirs after he should die." He described Cole—his baldness, his clean-shaven, sunburnt cheeks, his toothless mouth, the way he bumped into the doorjamb, the way he had squinted: "He seemed, both to Mr. Queen and myself, very nearsighted."

Beau went on to relate how Cole had left his fountain pen behind—the pen with which he had sat at that very desk and written out a check for $15,000.

"We sent the pen back to his yacht, Argonaut," said Beau, "but before doing so, we took microphotographs of some very unusual markings toward the end of the cap." He took an envelope from his pocket and handed it to the headquarters expert seated by the apparatus at the desk. "Dr. Jolliffe, here are those microphotographs. Will you examine them?"

The expert accepted the envelope. "Of course, I've only your word for it—whatever your purpose is, Mr. Rummell—that these photographs are of that pen."

And he, stepped before Edmund De Carlos, whipped back the man's coat, plucked a fountain-pen from his vest-pocket—the pen which De Carlos had employed to write out the check for $25,000 and tendered Ellery Queen, Inc., as a bribe—and handed the fat black gold-trimmed pen to the expert with an air of triumph.

De Carlos was startled. "I don't see—"

"Dr. Jolliffe," said Beau, "will you please examine this pen under the 'scope and compare its markings with those on the microphotographs?"

The expert went to work. When he looked up he said: "The markings on this pen and the markings on these photographs are identical."

"Then you'd say the microphotographs," demanded Beau, "are of this pen?"

"Unquestionably."

"I'm afraid, Mr. Rummell," remarked the district attorney, "that I don't get the point."

"You will, Oscar," said Beau grimly. "Just bear in mind that this man De Carlos had in his possession, when he entered this office tonight, a fountain-pen which was in the possession of Cadmus Cole three months ago."

District Attorney Sampson looked bewildered. "I still—"

Beau stood squarely before De Carlos. "What did you say your name was?"

De Carlos stared at him. "Why—Edmund De Carlos, of course. Of all the ridiculous questions—"

"You're a cock-eyed liar," said Beau. "Your name is Cadmus Cole!"

THE BEARDED man leaped to his feet. "You're insane!"

"You're Cadmus Cole," said Beau softly, "—nose for nose, eyes for eyes, mouth for mouth, chin for chin; in fact, feature for feature. And we can prove it!"

"Prove it?" The man licked his lips.

"If you'll be kind enough to remove your beard, your wig, your glasses, and your false teeth, Queen and I will make a formal identification of you as Cadmus Cole."

"Ridiculous! Never heard such nonsense, Inspector, you can't—Mr. District Attorney, I stand on my rights as—"

"One moment," snapped the inspector. He conferred with District Attorney Sampson inaudibly. Then he came forward and said abruptly to Beau: "You claim this man is really Cole, and that you and Ellery can identify him as such?"

"That's our story," said Beau, "and he's stuck with it."

"Then I'm sorry, Mr. De Carlos, or Mr. Cole, or whoever you are," said Inspector Queen in a grim voice, "but you'll have to submit to an identification test."

He reached up himself and pulled at the man's hair, and was obviously flabbergasted when the hair came off the man's head in one piece. Goossens sat open-mouthed, completely and genuinely astonished. Kerrie and Vi were gaping, too.

Sullenly, the man complied.

"Now your glasses."

The man did so, and remained blinking and squinting in the harsh glare of the office lights.

"How about this beard?" demanded the inspector of Beau. "Is that a phoney, too?"

"No, it's on the level," replied Beau with a grin. "He must have grown it between the time he visited us and the time he showed up in New York again after that dramatic little business of his own 'death at sea.'"

"Got a razor?" snapped Inspector Queen.

"Better. A barber." And Beau went into the laboratory. He emerged with a stranger who was carrying the kit. "Okay, Dominick," said Beau, smiling broadly. "Once over—but good! Kapeesh?"

The detective who accompanied Kerrie came forward on a sign from the inspector; but the bearded man sat down voluntarily in his chair and folded his arms, blinking and squinting furiously.

The barber shaved him, and his audience watched the operation with a fascinated expectancy. Beau tense behind the chair, as if he expected the bearded man to leap from the chair and try to escape. But the man sat quietly.

"Who?"

"Captain Angus and the coast man."

"Oh, baby! Keep 'em out there, El, till I find the psychological moment. Then—socko!"

When the beard was gone and the barber dismissed, Beau and Ellery surveyed that denuded, working face in silence. The sunken cheeks, the squinty eyes, the bald head. . . .

"Well?" said Inspector Queen. "Is this the same man who called on you here three months ago?"

"That's Cadmus Cole," said Beau.

"Ellery?"

"The same man," nodded Mr. Queen.

"Frame-up!" mumbled the shaven man, drooling. "It's a frame-up! I'm De Carlos! I'm De Carlos!"

"Why, the bug even talks the same way," grinned Beau. "Now that his plate's missing. Doesn't he, Ellery?"

"Identically."

"Of course," said District Attorney Sampson, "again we have only the word of you gentlemen."

"Not at all," retorted Beau. "The day Cole called on us in this office I listened in on the conversation from my office next door. We've developed a system in this agency, Your Worship. We like to keep complete records of our wackier clients. That's why we photographed the pen. That's why," he said, taking a large photograph from his pocket, "I took a candid-camera shot of our friend here through a little convenient arrangement in the wall, and later enlarged it. How's this?"

They crowded around the enlargement, staring from the photograph to the man in the chair.

Ghost Fleet May Gather Weather Data

Maritime Commission Considers Proposal To Recondition Vessels

By Alfred Friendly

A plan to recommission half a dozen of America's "ghost fleet" wartime freighters, and use them as floating weather reporting stations, has been under discussion at the Maritime Commission for several weeks.

The Weather Bureau, it was reported, is anxious to establish the project as a substitute for gathering weather data formerly supplied on a voluntary basis by merchant vessels of all nationalities. Since the war, however, only ships of neutral registry are willing to reveal their positions by radio messages, and the chief former source of information, from British, French and German freighters, has dried up.

President Roosevelt is said to be keenly interested in the proposal, especially as it concerns the safety of transatlantic plane flights. Aircraft making the ocean trip are almost "flying blind" at the present time, it is said, owing to lack of adequate weather data.

Vital in Forecasting

In addition to providing information for transatlantic flights, the Weather Bureau is interested in obtaining news of conditions over the ocean to improve forecasts for the continental area. To the bureau, "weather does not stop at the shoreline," and offshore conditions play a vital role in determining atmospheric changes ashore.

Chief objection to the plan, according to Maritime Commission officers, is expense. To recondition the laid-up freighters, idle for many years, would be costly. Officials said the ships are scarcely suitable for remaining in one spot long periods.

Meantime, to make up for the absence of offshore weather reports from merchant ships, a cooperative project of the Coast Guard and the Weather Bureau is already under way. Two Coast Guard cutters, the Bibb and the Duane, have been dispatched to permanent stations between Bermuda and the Azores. Eventually four more cutters are expected to join the service, relieving each other at intervals.

Data Come Often

Before the war, the French government stationed a ship, the Carimare, west of the Azores to perform a similar service. It was recalled at the outbreak of hostilities.

A sidelight on the Coast Guard project, it was learned yesterday, is that protests are anticipated from the British government, which realizes that the short-wave weather messages of the cutters may give Germany valuable strategic information about weather developments in the British Isles.

At present, it is explained, the British are "on the weather side" of the Germans, since weather conditions generally move across the Atlantic and across Europe from east to west. Thus the British can forecast German weather before the Germans. On the other hand, weather reports and forecasts are closely guarded secrets in England and even in Canada. The Germans are at a distinct disadvantage in planning air raids, for example, without information on probable weather developments over their enemy's country.

Jacob Baker, president of the United Federal Workers of America, yesterday took pains to remind Senator McKellar (Democrat), of Tennessee, that the Lloyd-La Follette antigag law was still on the books.

In hearings before the Senate Appropriations subcommittee on independent offices, McKellar had flayed Federal workers for "lobbying" on Capitol Hill.

Hathaway Asked Labor to Unite

A typographical error in The Post in its report of Sunday's talk by Clarence Hathaway, editor of the Communist newspaper, The Daily Worker, gave a misimpression which The Post regrets and wishes to correct.

The report said Hathaway spoke under a sign reading "White labor as the bulwark of the Nation, democracy and peace." Actually, the sign read "Unite labor as the bulwark of the Nation, democracy and peace." The error gave the erroneous impression that the Communist Party would discriminate against colored labor.

Comdr. Olch Asks U. S. to Get Bases In Caribbean

The United States should take foreign naval stations in the Caribbean in return for the cancellation of the debts of European nations to strengthen its defense, Lieut. Comdr. Isaiah Olch said yesterday.

In an article appearing in the semiofficial publication, United States Naval Proceedings, Commander Olch said that he did not believe in complete transfer of sovereignty, but only in the transfer of naval bases.

He wrote that the acquisition of the bases for our own use without imparing he sovereignty of the possessions themselves or the absolute destruction of their naval facilities would further American policy of "a decided interest" in the Caribbean and adjacent areas.
